The Search for Alternatives

The crises in the power and gas sector are largely attributed to the past government's inaction, mismanagement and flawed policy in the energy sector. Apart from virtually no gas exploration activity even the bleak forecast of the national committee on gas utilisation did not induce the government to look for viable alternatives to this fast depleting resource. Now it seems that apart from a miraculous discovery of massive new gas resources, there is no way the country's energy needs can continue to be met mainly by the gas sector.

The Spirit of Baishakh

Bangladeshis have always been fond of celebrations and colours. Pahela Baishakh can be defined as a day when all Bangladeshis leave their differences at their doorsteps and come forward to celebrate in their very own ways. The day is proof enough to say that it is the spirit of being a Bangladeshi, within us, that truly defines our race and unites us.
