Of Longing and Denial

Fokhrul's solo exhibition in Delhi

As an experimental painter, Fokhrul delves into dots, points, monochromic images and architectural lines.

TAKIR HOSSAIN

Artist Mohammad Fokhrul Islam came to prominence in the mid '90s. His works are exhibited often. As an experimental painter, he delves into dots, points, monochromic images and architectural lines. Glow, simplicity and straight lines are noticeable features of Fokhrul's works. His solo exhibition, titled "Of Longing and Denial," is now on at Art Heritage, a reputed gallery in New Delhi, India.

Fokhrul started off as a ceramic artist in the early 1990s and suddenly decided to switch to painting in the mid '90s. His voyage through the world of paintings has experienced a spiritual and meditative world, producing uninhabited landscapes. His works appear fresh and new because he has created a work process, which is quite unique. He wishes to establish a personal language in his works and feels that it is not necessary for an artist to explain or define his/her work.

When one looks at his works more intimately, innumerable combinations of lines and tones are noticeable. But the interesting thing is that the lines and tones do not have a chaotic or monotonous impact on his works. Fokhrul's monochromic images give the viewer a dreamy vision. The artist likes to paint gloomy sunsets, silent woodlands, enormous deserts, thick forests, whirlwinds and other facets of nature. The images linger in mind for their pure forms and unusual appearance. Fokhrul's work reflects an introspective mind. The images are done on paper with printing ink. The artist uses printer's ink and mustard oil to create his inscrutable cosmic subjects and metaphysical landscapes.

A number of his works reveal silence and emptiness. After viewing the works, one can appreciate the beauty of simplicity. Some works show a combination of modern geometric forms and broken lines. Vertical and horizontal lines are admirably presented in some of Fokhrul's works.

The exhibition in Delhi ends on April 28.
