INTERNATIONAL

Sri Lanka rights abuse Maoists kill probe ends abruptly

AP, Colombo

A Sri Lankan government investigation into human rights abuses during its war with Tamil Tiger rebels has been disbanded with more than half of its cases unresolved, an official said

The decision came as the government brushed off demands for an international investigation into the final ferocious battles of the war, which ended last month after the military routed the rebels in an offensive the after Amnesty International accused the gov-U.N. says killed more than 7,000 civilians.

of shelling civilian areas and said the rebels held hundreds of thousands of people as human shields, shooting those who attempted

A presidential commission of inquiry was denied the allegations. established two years ago under intense international pressure to investigate earlier claims of abuses in the war. It was assigned 16 cases of alleged abuses by both sides, including the 2006 execution-style slaying of 17 aid workers edly rejected such calls as a violation of its for the French organization Action Against sovereignty. Hunger.

Court justice who chaired the commission, said it had only completed work on seven of the assigned cases by the time its mandate expired unable to pinpoint and tell exactly who it is, but Sunday. Extensions had been routinely granted there are certain possibilities," he said.

in the past, but not this time. Instead, the commission was dissolved, he said.

"We ran out of time," he said. "If we had gotten another year, probably we could have done it."

It was not clear why the inquiry was ended. "I have no idea what the reasoning is," said Rajiva Wijesinha, the secretary in the Ministry of Human Rights, who usually serves as a government spokesman in such matters.

The commission's dissolution came days ernment of failing to seriously investigate Human rights groups accused the military reported abuses during the 25-year civil war. It said the few cases that are brought to trial rarely end in convictions and accused the government of using bribes, threats and even murder to eliminate witnesses. Government officials

The London-based rights group called for the establishment of an international commission to investigate allegations of recent human rights violations. The government has repeat-

Udalagama said even in the cases the com-Nissanka Udalagama, a former Supreme mission completed, it was often unable to identify the perpetrators.

In the killing of the 17 aid workers, "we are

Pak military prepares to hunt Taliban chief

AFP, Islamabad

Pakistan's military is taking operation against Baitullah for an offensive into the law- said. less northwest tribal belt to hunt down a feared Taliban commander and his network, a spokesman said yesterday.

A government official had regard. Sunday announced that Pakistan would open up a second front in a seven-week offensive against Taliban militants and pursue Baitullah Mehsud into his stronghold of started. South Waziristan.

decision to launch a military

"The army has received the steps and measures are being taken by the military in this same press conference in Islamabad that the new cam- targets. paign had not yet officially

Fighting rumbled on out-The army had so far stayed side the tribal belt, meansilent on a fresh campaign in while, with the army saying 13 the semi-autonomous region militants were killed in the last string of recent deadly attacks along the rugged Afghan 24 hours in Swat and Lower in key cities across the border, but military spokes- Dir districts, where security nuclear-armed nation. man Major General Athar forces launched an anti-Abbas told reporters Tuesday, Taliban push in late April.

"As you know the govern- Taliban in Swat valley after the districts of South Waziristan.

ment has taken a principled insurgents flouted a peace deal and advanced to within 100 kilometres (60 miles) of "necessary steps" to prepare Mehsud and his network," he Islamabad, and the tribal belt was rumoured to be next.

> The United States govrequisite orders. Necessary ernment has said that Al-Qaeda and Taliban militants including Mehsud are hiding out in tribal areas, some Information minister crossing the border into Qamar Zaman Kaira told the war-torn Afghanistan and plotting attacks on Western Washington has posted a five-million-dollar bounty on the head of Mehsud, whose Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan group has been blamed for a

Earlier Tuesday, security officials said artillery struck they had received their orders. - The military took on the insurgent hideouts in several

A homeless Indian child sleeps in a shady corner in New Delhi yesterday. The unrelenting heat is persisting in the Indian capital as temperatures reached 44 degrees Celsius with weathermen forecasting a severe heatwave across the plains of northern India.

Lee and Obama to discuss North Korean threats

AP, Washington

President Lee Myung-bak will unity of their alliance and a expand its nuclear programs Pyongyang to condemn sanc- motivate UN member states gives their meeting Tuesday at tions imposed by the United to actually enforce the sancthe White House a sense of Nations after the country's tions specified in the UN urgency. The presidents probably will express their refusal to accept the North as a nuclear weapons state and condemn recent missile and South Korea, the U.S. and of liberal rule in which South nuclear tests.

appeal for a world without will bring due consequences." nuclear weapons. However, he told The Wall Street Journal, "we are faced with North Korea trying to become a nuclear power, and this really is a question we must deal with now." Lee's visit, is likely to pledge its continued commitment to use its military muscle to protect the South should the North attack. Such comments are welcome in Seoul and Tokyo, no matter how many times U.S. officials repeat sanctions. them.Lee's talks with Obama be eager to show the North the Geithner. Secretary of State conducted in 2006. Hillary Rodham Clinton weldetermination not to back comed Lee to Washington on adviser in President George W Monday, the same day tens of Bush's administration, said North Korea's pledge to thousands rallied in another nuclear test could latest nuclear test. Lee's office released a statement saying Clinton had called Korea since he took office in for close cooperation between early 2008. He ended a decade Japan in implementing the UN Korea sought to embrace the Before leaving Seoul, Lee sanctions to "get North Korea North and refrained from said he supported Obama's to realise that its bad behavior criticism, a so-called "sun-long as the United States and sions. Pyongyang regularly its allies maintain a firm calls Lee a traitor. stance, North Korea's belief that it will be rewarded for its will top discussions, another bad behavior if it waits long The United States, during enough will dissipate," the Obama: an ambitious South | Meir Dagan. statement said.

readying a possible test of a and services. missile that could reach

The US government offi- autoindustry.

come on the second day of a cially confirmed Monday that three-day visit also scheduled North Korea carried out an As North Korea threatens to include meetings with US underground atomic test in nuclear war, President Barack trade envoy Ron Kirk, Defense late May. The Americans said Obama and South Korean Secretary Robert Gates and the blast was somewhat larger Treasury Secretary Timothy than the country's first test, Victor Cha, a senior Asia resolution against the North.

Lee has infuriated North shine" policythat provided aid | programme was interrupted. Lee told Clinton that "as without demanding conces-

While the nuclear standoff tense issue looms for Lee and Korean-US free trade agree-North Korea is reportedly ment to slash tariffs on goods

The deal was painstakingly Alaska. The North also may be negotiated but currently is in preparing for a third nuclear limbo, stalled over US lawtest in defiance of the UN makers' worries it could hurt an already suffering American

4 policemen in India

AFP, Ranchi

Suspected Maoist rebels in India killed at least four policemen in a gun battle in the eastern state of Jharkhand, officials said yesterday.

Between 30 to 40 guerrillas opened fire on security forces, killing four officers and injuring three others in a three-hourlong shoot-out. "The security personnel were killed in a gun battle with Maoist rebels," said police spokesman Satyanarayan Pradhan, adding that authorities were hunting for the mili-

Police said the clash occurred in the district of Palamau, 190 kilometres from the state capital Ranchi.

A Maoist insurgency, which grew out of a peasant uprising in 1967, has hit more than half of India's 29 states. The guerrillas say they are fighting for the rights of neglected tribespeople and landless farmers.

Six die, 24 trapped in Indonesia mine blast

AP, Jakarta

An explosion ripped through a coal mine in western Indonesia yesterday, killing six people and trapping at least 24 others who were feared dead.

Dozens of rescuers tried to reach the trapped men in the 300-foot-deep mine, but rock slides and a mix of gas and coal debris forced them to resurface after four hours of digging, police Chief Yasman Esha of West Sumatra province said by phone from the scene.

"We ear the miners are dead by now," Esha said.

Rescuers recovered six bodies in the hours after the morning blast. Officials said three other people were in critical condition at a hospital.

Police were trying to determine what caused the blast. A preliminary investigation said it was triggered by leaking methanegas.

The mine, owned by a local company, is 900 km northwest of the capital, Jakarta.

Indonesia has some of the world's largest coal deposits and is a major coal exporter.

UK appoints new head of MI6

AFP, London

Britain's ambassador to the United Nations was yesterday named as the new head of its MI6 foreign intelligence service, who is traditionally known by his James Bond-style moniker "C."

John Sawers will take over at MI6, or the Secret Intelligence Service, in November, replacing John Scarlett who has spent more than five years in the job.

Foreign Secretary David Miliband said: "I welcome the appointment of Sir John Sawers as the new 'C'. I look forward to working with him on the challenges we face as a

"International terrorism, the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the growth of regional conflict and instability mean that there has never been a time when the skills and dedication of our intelligence agencies, including SIS, have been more necessary to our national security and the safety of our people around the world.

Iran could have N-bomb by 2014: Israel

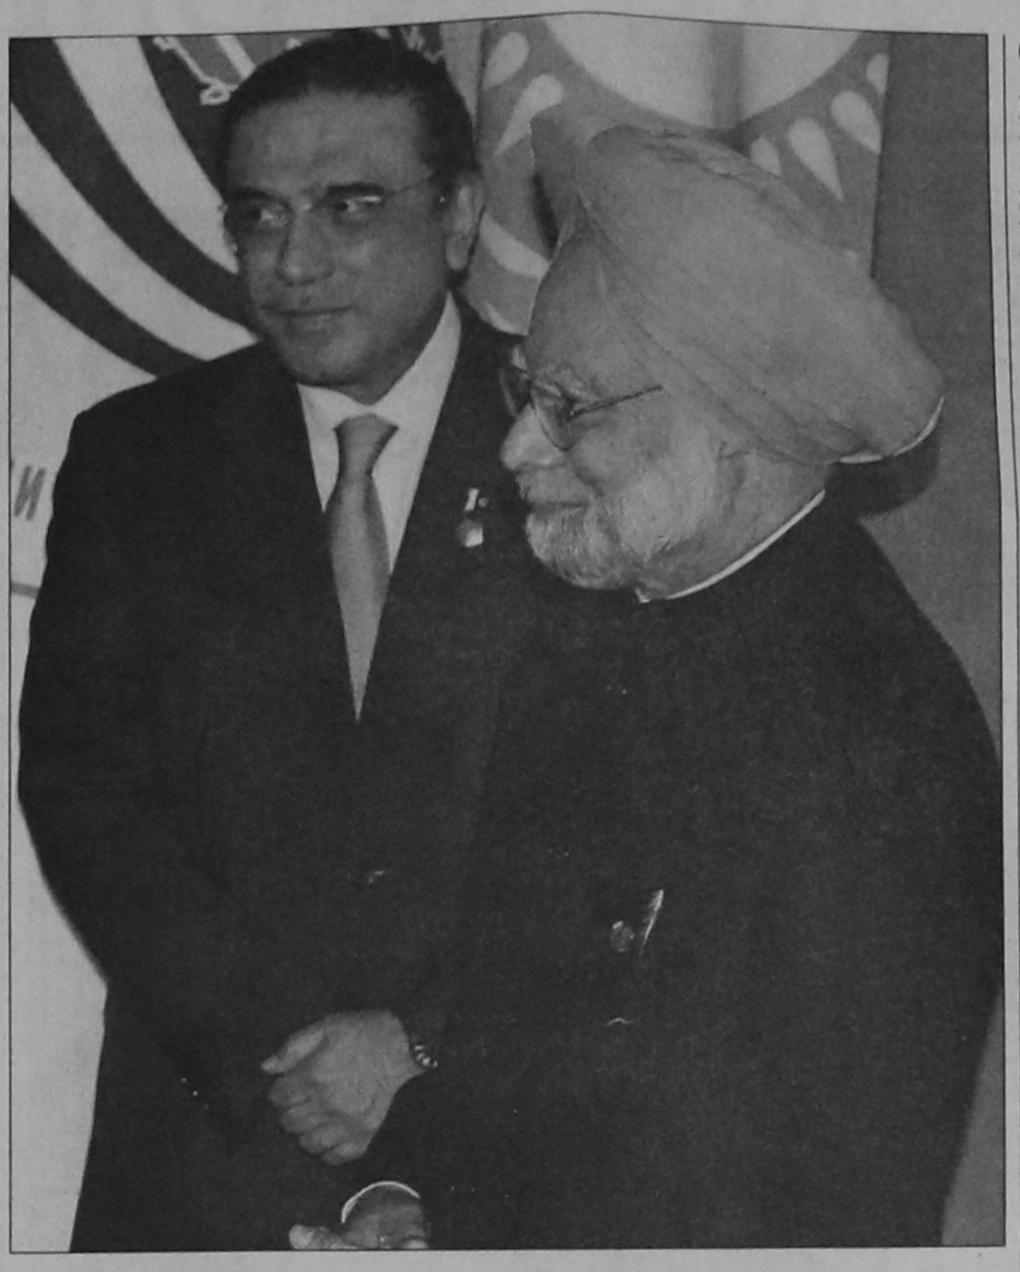

AFP, Jerusalem

The head of Israel's Mossad spy agency said yesterday that Iran would have a ready-tolaunch nuclear bomb within five years unless its nuclear "Unless their programme experiences technical problems, the Iranians will have by 2014 a bomb ready to be used, which would represent a concrete threat for Israel," said

"This threat must be removed," he told parliament's foreign affairs and defence committee. He acknowledged that maintaining international sanctions against Iran could lead to a halt of Tehran's nuclear programme.

Pakistani President Asif Ali Zardari (L) and Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh (R) take part in a group photo shoot in Yekaterinburg yesterday during the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) summit. Singh met Zardari for the first time since the Mumbai attacks, bluntly declaring that Pakistani soil must not be used for terrorism.

Mumbai attacks report slams city police chief

AFP, Mumbai

Mumbai's police chief failed to lead his force from the front during last year's attacks on the city, a committee said yesterday as it released partial findings of a probe into how agency. the crisis was handled.

The committee, headed by a high-ranking former Indian home ministry official, said senior officers had told them that Hasan Gafoor did not guide them adequately or ask about ongoing operations during the 60-hour standoff.

"During the whole operation, he (Gafoor) was stationed at only one location near Hotel Trident," according to the report, which was presented to lawmakers at the Maharashtra state assembly, sitting in Mumbai.

The report was not released November 26-29 attacks, in full for fear of prejudicing which left 166 people dead the ongoing trial of one of the and more than 300 injured. alleged gunmen, state home minister Jayant Patil was of the western Indian state, quoted as saying by the Press Trust of India (PTI) news

"There was lack of coordinated and visible control due to which the message went to the public that police were ineffective in handling the situation," the report said, according to the PTI.

touch with senior officers like" situation. trying to deal with strikes against multiple targets across the south of the city, colleagues did not feel they were part of a united force, it added.

Gafoor last weekend became the latest high-profile figure to lose his job after the The former chief minister Vilasrao Deshmukh, and India's interior minister Shivraj Patil stepped down in the wake of the carnage.

The report also said Gafoor was responsible for procedural errors in the police and emergency service response to the attacks, but conceded that only a paramilitary force Even though Gafoor was in could have handled the "war-

Indian media said that three opposition lawmakers were suspended after angry protests calling for the full report to be published, while state cabinet members thought the document was biased against Gafoor.

next to posters of the top three anything for development or progress for the country. Of all the people who are running for the presidency, Abdullah could be his ability to again win the support of his fellow

Pashtun tribespeople in the south and east of the country

In some campaign posters,

warlord accused of rights

abuses Mohammad Qasim

Key to Karzai's success

"He (Karzai) could not do candidates.

will be the best."

Gilani seeks restart of Indo-Pak talks

PTI, Islamabad

As Prime Minister Manmohan Singh met President Asif Ali Zardari in Russia, premier Yousuf Raza Gilani has sought early resumption of the stalled dialogue process between India and Pakistan to address long-standing issues like Kashmir.

Gilani said the early resumption of the composite dialogue between Pakistan and India is "imperative to address the long-standing issues resulting in tension between the two countries i.E. Kashmir dispute as well as the water dispute".

He was speaking to a delegation led by Pugwash Conferences on Science and World Affairs secretary general Paolo Cotta-Ramsunio that called on him yesterday.

Gilani assured the delegation of his "government's sincerity in proceeding with the dialogue process and for maintaining cordial bilateral relations with all its neighbours including India".

Zardari and Singh met today on the sidelines of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation summit in Russia.

Gilani also said the international community should fulfil its pledges of assistance to Pakistan in its efforts to assist the people displaced by the military operations against the Taliban in Swat and other areas of Malakand division.

Soldiers, several 'rebels' killed in Afghanistan

AFP, Kabul

Two Afghan soldiers and several suspected militants were killed in fighting and raids across insurgency-hit Afghanistan, authorities said vesterday.

The soldiers, from the UStrained Afghan army, died after their patrol was attacked by rebels in the northeastern province of Kunduz on Monday, the defence ministry said in a statement

Three militants were also killed during "very intense fighting," the statement said. Eight rebels were injured and four others captured, it added.

Kunduz, where hundreds of German troops have deployed under a UNmandated force that arrived in Afghanistan in 2001, has seen a surge in militant violence in recent months as have other parts of Afghanistan. Most insurgent attacks are however concentrated in the south and east of the country.

Several suspected militants were killed in operations on Monday by Afghan and US-led military forces in the country's south, a joint statement by the US-led force and Afghan defence ministry said.

UN says refugee numbers set to surge in 2009

AFP, Geneva

The number of people uprooted from their homes fell to 42 million in 2008 but is set to surge this year because of conflicts in Pakistan, Somalia and Sri Lanka, the UN refugee agency said yesterday.

The total of internally displaced people, refugees and asylum seekers around the world dropped by 700,000 last year, according to UN High Commissioner for Refugee's annual "Global Trends" report.

But fresh displacement, which was not included in the report, including some two million in northwestern Pakistan, had "more than offset that decline", the UNHCR said.

"In 2009, we have already seen substantial new displacements, namely in Pakistan, Sri Lanka and Somalia," High Commissioner Antonio Guterres said. "While some displacements may be short-lived, others can take years and even decades to resolve." Some 80 percent of the people uprooted in the world are in developing nations, the UNHCR said, noting that wealthy nations were growing increasingly reluctant to take in asylum seekers as the economic crisis bites. "It also shows that some of the more vocal criticism that you hear in some industralised countries from populist politicians and some media about being 'flooded' with refugees is perhaps a bit overdone," said UNHCR spokesman Ron Redmond.

Afghan presidential campaign opens

AP, Kabul

A two-month campaign season began yesterday for presidential elections to decide who leads Afghanistan for the next five years, as the Taliban rebellion grows more violent and the US sends in tens of thousands oftroops to combat it.

Campaigning got off to a slow start. The only signs of activity were the posters of President Hamid Karzai who is currently visiting Russia and some of his 40 opponents in the Aug 20 vote that appeared overnight on the streets of Kabul.

Karzai, who has served as Afghan leader since soon after the Taliban regime's ouster in first presidential vote in 2004, standing at a street corner is expected to win again. But many Afghans are unhappy with his leadership.

Militant violence is rising and public anger reverberates against his government and US troops for accidental civilian killings in military operations. Economic issues will be crucial too. Poverty remains widespread and corruption is rife. Karzai's main challengers are former Cabinet colleagues: former Finance Minister Ashraf Ghani and former Foreign Minister Abdullah Abdullah.

for Karzai, but later I saw that he was not worth it," said Mohammad Shokran, a 28-2001 and comfortably won the year-old medical student, Fahim.

"The last election I voted the largest ethnic group in this diverse nation of about 30 million people. the president appeared alongside his two vice presidential nominees, including a former

An elderly Afghan man holds up a poster of Shahla Ata, a member National Assembly of Afghanistan, and a candidate for the August presidential elections at a market in Kabul yesterday. Campaigning for Afghanistan's second-ever presidential elections kicked off on June 16 with hundreds of posters hoisted in the capital and candidates setting out to win over voters new to democracy.