Rights should start from grassroots

Right to Information seen as tool of sharing power with people

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Right to information activists recommend that the process of empowering people through the Right to Information (RTI) act should start at grassroots level by providing them with all information they require.

Suggesting an awareness building campaign about people's right to information, they said awareness is necessary to get maximum benefit from the law. They termed the RTI a tool of sharing power with the people and said people should be sensitised and made aware of their rights.

Addressing the concluding session of a two-day conference titled "Right to Information:

Law, Institution and Citizens," they observed RTI can strengthen democracy and help establish participatory democracy through facilitating free flow of information.

Right to Information Forum and Manusher Jonno Foundation jointly organised the conference at Dhaka Sheraton Hotel.

During discussion, the speakers called for joint efforts of the government, NGOs and other stakeholders for effective implementation of the law.

Wrapping up the two-day conference, Convener of RTI Forum Shaheen Anam suggested a national plan of action to effectively implement the law, capacity building of the

More structures knocked down

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The eviction drive to free the rivers from encroachers continued as the authorities demolished structures built on Shitalakhyia and removed earth from Turag yesterday.

Bangladesh Inland Water Transport Authority (BIWTA) and Narayanganj district administration carried out the drive on 11th day in Shitalakhyia and destroyed the remaining portions of the boundary wall erected by Al-Noor Paper Mills encroaching around 14,000 square feet of the river in Dhakeswari area.

"It's astonishing that such a huge boundary wall was constructed in the river," said Executive Magistrate Abdul Hai of Narayanganj, adding that the encroacher also

Maoists banned as terrorist group

High alert as Indian rebels stage strike in 5 states

AFP, New Delhi/ Bhubaneswar

India's government yesterday slapped a formal ban on the country's Maoist rebels, officially designating the group as a terrorist organisation, a report said.

The ban came as the rebels staged a two-day strike in five states across eastern and central India on Monday, amid an upsurge in fighting in West Bengal state.

"A decision has been taken to ban the Communist Party of India-Maoist (CPI-M) under the Unlawful Activities Prevention Act as a terrorist organisation," the Press Trust of India news agency quoted unidentified home ministry sources as saying.

The CPI-M was formed by the unification of several leftwing outfits in 2004, and is now included among 34 groups listed as terrorist organisations by the federal government. Others include al-Qaeda and the Tamil Tigers.

A spokesman for the home ministry refused to confirm the

Tough laws on cards to ensure medicare

ALPHA ARZU

Private medical practitioners and hospitals may face criminal charges and can be sued under tough new laws to protect patients from maltreatment under a proposed ordinance on private health care soon to be placed in parliament.

The proposed Medical Practice and Private Clinics and Laboratories Ordinance (Amendment) is being developed by the government to tightly regulate private medical practitioners, hospitals, foreign doctors and nurses.

The draft of the ordinance has been finalised to place at the parliament after budget session which ends June 30, according to sources in the health and family welfare ministry.

The new laws would strip private medical service providers of their license and punish them under existing criminal laws if they are found guilty of wilful maltreatment or negligence which causes death, threat of death, damage to organs, or permanent mental disorder of the patient.

The cases would be judged by an expert committee formed by the Bangladesh Medical and Dental Council (BMDC).

Government doctors and nurses will face six months in prison and fined Tk 50,000 if they serve private health care organisations during their office hour, under the new laws.

While private clinics or hospitals will require permission from the BMDC to recruit foreign doctors or nurses or face a six-month jail term and a Tk 1 lakh fine.

The draft ordinance also states that private clinics or hospitals must have sufficient treatment facilities, appropriate medical equipment and adequate sitting arrangements for patient visitors to receive license.

Other provisions proposed in the draft ordinance are similar to those stipulated in the existing Medical Practice and Private Clinics and Laboratories (Regulation) Ordinance, 1982, although none of them have been implemented in full.

Revolutionary Guard warns of action

Hundreds of Iran protesters detained, polls watchdog acknowledges voting irregularities

AGENCIES, Tehran

Iran's most powerful security force threatened yesterday to crush any further opposition protests over the disputed presidential election, warning demonstrators to prepare for a "revolutionary confrontation" if they take to the streets again. It was the sternest warning yet from the elite Revolutionary Guard.

The country's highest electoral authority, the Guardian Council, acknowledged voting irregularities in 50 electoral districts in the June 12 vote, the most serious official admission so far of problems in the election that the opposition has labelled a fraud. But the council insisted the problems do not affect the outcome of the vote. The electoral council said President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad won by a landslide.

The Revolutionary Guard, in a statement posted on its Web site, warned protesters to "be prepared for a resolution and revolutionary confrontation with the Guards, Basij and other security forces and disciplinary forces" if they continue their near-daily rallies.

The Basij, a plainclothes militia under the command of the Revolutionary Guard, have been used to quell streets protests that erupted after the election result was announced. At least 17 protesters have been killed, according to an official Iranian toll.

The Guard statement ordered demonstrators to "end the sabotage and rioting activities" and said their resistance is a "conspiracy" against Iran.

Opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi vowed Sunday night to keep up the protests,

SQ Chy claims to have lost certificates

BNP lawmaker Salauddin Quader Chowdhury yesterday claimed that he did not mention his educational qualifications in nomination papers as the joint forces took his certificates away during the state of emergency.

He told BBC Bangla Service radio yesterday evening, "I did not provide two kinds of information. I have only written that I have no certificates. I did not write that I have no educational qualifications."

"Why do they [the Election Commission] not oust me from the parliament, if they have that power?" he said.

He said he had no certificates as the joint forces took all documents from his house and office during his arrest. "The EC asked me and I replied."

Some key JMB men hiding in Pakistan

SHARIFUL ISLAM

Some key members of banned Islamist militant organisation Jama'atul Mujahideen Bangladesh (JMB), wanted in the list of law enforcement agencies, are now staying in Pakistan for 'taking military trainings or fighting in favour of any militant group'.

Wishing anonymity, a top Rab official said they have so far information about two 'Ehsar' (full-time) members who have been staying in Pakistan for the last three months.

Earlier, detained JMB explosives expert Zahidul Islam alias 'Boma Mizan' disclosed the information about the flight of two members - Sayeed and Shiplu - during interrogation.

'Boma Mizan' said the two 'Ehsar' members opted to flee to Pakistan for evading arrest. But law enforcers suspect that they are staying in Pakistan for taking military training from any militant group or fighting in favour of any of them.

Around three months back, a travel agency in the city's Fakirapool area helped them to leave for Pakistan, which is experiencing intense fighting between Pakistan army and Taliban fighters.

Quoting the detained JMB man, the Rab official said family members of the two 'Ehsar' members provided the fund for their trip. But he suspected that the organisation might have provided the fund as both Sayeed and Shiplu were more influential among around 500 'Ehsar' members.

He said they are investigating whether the organisation provided the fund. Law enforcers suspect the number of JMB
