India: As seen by Daniélou
and Burnier

Visitors at the exhibition.

DWAIPAYAN BARUA,
Chittagong

A two-week photo exhibition, titled "India through the lenses of Alain Daniélou & Raymond Burnier," began here at Alliance Française last Saturday to offer the audiences a look at India -- landscapes, art and lifestyle -- some sixty years ago.

A total of 40 photographs featuring ancient sculptures, architecture and different communities in India by Alain Daniélou and Raymond Burnier -- during their two-decade-long stay in India (from the mid-1930s to late 1950s) -- are on display at the exhibition.

Assistant Indian High Commissioner Subrata Bhattacharjee inaugurated the exhibition.

Alliance Française and

Assistant High Commission of India in Chittagong have jointly organised the exhibition.

Alain Daniélou was born at Neuilly-sur-Seine in Paris in 1907, and received little formal education due to his fragile health as a child. Keen to learn more about Indian music Daniélou along with his Swiss partner Raymond, a photographer, travelled by car to Afghanistan and onwards to India in 1932. The duo initially stayed in Shantiniketan, upon invitation of Rabindranath Tagore, who played an instrumental role in their stay in India. In 1936, they moved to Banaras (Varanasi) and started photographically documenting Indian art and lifestyle.

The duo rented an old palace, Rewa Kothi at the Assi Ghat in Banaras and travelled widely in India, to Khajuraho and other lesser-known temples to take photographs.

Subrata Bhattacharjee in his speech said the two-decade long association of Daniélou and Burnier with India contributed immensely to the awareness of the Indian culture and history in the western world.

Many Europeans and Americans got their first glimpse of India through their photographs while the pictures they took during their trips to different Indian temples made those famous in the world, he said.

Terming the exhibition a "window to India six decades ago," Subrata hoped that the youth of Chittagong would find the photographs useful in understanding life in India during that period.

Director of Alliance Française, Chittagong, Samuel Berthet said that the remarkable work of Daniélou and Burnier -- creating an artistic inventory of the motifs and sculptures found on the ancient Indian temples -- is an invaluable heritage for the aesthetic and semantic appreciation of the civilisation of the subcontinent.

Dr. Gurupada Chakrabarti, cultural coordinator of Alliance Française, moderated the programme.

The exhibition ends on July 30.

Sony to put together Michael Jackson film

According to Variety, Sony Pictures is in final talks to put together a feature film about the late Michael Jackson. The film will be culled from 80 hours of rehearsal footage that was filmed for concerts that Jackson was in preparations to perform in London.

Sony will most likely pay about $50 million for the worldwide rights to AEG Entertainment, which presently owns the footage. They showed it to studios last week.

The plan is for the film to showcase "three videos, including an alternative version of Jackson's 'Thriller,' which were shot to be interstitial programming during the London concerts."

It looks like Kenny Ortega ("High School Musical 3: Senior Year") will be directing the film. He shot the rehearsal footage and he is presently beginning to put the footage together. The plan is for Sony to release the film before 2010.

Fox, Universal, Paramount and Relativity wanted to make the film but Sony eventually won out because Sony

Music Entertainment presently owns the publishing rights to Jackson's songs.

AEG will be selling the TV and video rights to the August 29 tribute concert that is scheduled in London on Jackson's birthday.
