K. A. M. Morshed spoke on 'Youth and Millennium Development Goals (MDGs)'. He focused on the MDGs condition in Bangladesh and some other regions, and youth's involvement and opportunities to successfully achieve those in a developing country like Bangladesh. 'Leadership for the 21st Century' was the third session of the programme, which was conducted by Ejaj Ahmad. He discussed on types of leadership, major skills that one must master to become a perfect leader, community leadership, comprehension of responsibilities and opportunities of 21st century. He gave the example of BYLC students, who came from various backgrounds like Madrassah, English and Bengali Medium Schools, and doing a fantastic job by practicing community leadership in Mirpur and Uttara's slum areas. He also explained the short term and long term opportunity cost benefit analysis which is very important to fix one's vision and objective.

"The first day of the workshop was indeed an eye opener and gave me a critical sight of leadership," expressed Kazi Sarmad Karim, tutor in BRAC University. "I liked Ejaj Ahmad's definition of a leader. He said a leader is who leads on to make changes for the betterment but he is not a hero. This workshop is going to assist me in my profession," he added.

The fourth session was about 'Nuts and Bolts of NGO Management, Development, and Administration' and was conducted by Farid Uddin Ahmed who gave out a brief overview to the young participants on 'Social and Business Entrepreneurship', and the basic idea of organisational management, development and administration in the context of Bangladesh. The objectives of this session were to
