CHT land survey by year-end

Indigenous people's land to be recovered, says minister

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Law Minister Shafique Ahmed yesterday said the government will carry out a survey in the hill districts by December to recover and protect the land of the indigenous people.

"The government will engage its efforts in land survey in the hill districts without any delay and it will be completed by December," said Shafique Ahmed.

The minister was speaking at a meeting which was arranged by Bangladesh Adivasi Forum marking the International Day of the World's Indigenous People yesterday with the demand of constitutional recognition of the indigenous people.

"The first condition of protecting land rights is to conduct a survey of land in the hill districts. The survey would be the first task to recover the land of indigenous people occupied over the years," he added.

He also mentioned that necessary measures would also be taken to recover land of the indigenous people living on plain land.

"If we want to protect the rights of the indigenous people in the real sense, we have to ensure that adivasi land cannot be transferred or sold to non-adivasi people."

The minister also sought assistance from the indigenous people to bring back the Constitution of 1972 to protect their rights.

As he made the announcements and pledged to take initiative for implementation of the Chittagong Hill Tracts Agreement, the meeting venue -- Institution of Engineers, Bangladesh -- was echoed with sounds of appreciation.

Adivasi people from across the country thronged the Institution in hundreds of groups in colourful dresses and passed the day singing, dancing and exchanging greetings.

Representatives of international organisations side by side with the local speakers and experts demanded immediate implementation of the CHT accord.

Traffic dept caught in poor logistics

Congestion, accidents keep on rising in city

MUKHLESUR RAHMAN

Amidst the ever-worsening Dhaka traffic, the traffic department cannot properly address congestion and high frequency of accidents due to inadequate number of traffic personnel and their poor logistic support.

The ongoing drive against reckless driving and vehicles without route permits and fitness certificates cannot achieve expected level of success due to inadequate number of traffic personnel even though the drive is being carried out round the clock on every corner of the city.

At important intersections and areas, traffic police stop buses and minibuses and on an average day fine 100-150 vehicles for not having fitness certificates and route permits, DMP officials said.

During the first 24 days of the special drive that started on May 1, 1,618 vehicles were fined and 360 buses were seized.

Joint Commissioner (traffic) Manjur Kader Khan said in June traffic police fined vehicles Tk 1.94 crore and in July Tk 1.97 crore.

He said each vehicle is usually fined between Tk 200 and Tk 250.

Former joint commissioner (traffic) Mohammad Jasim Uddin, who has been transferred outside Dhaka recently, said, "Traffic

45 killed in north India landslide

AFP, AP, Dehradun

At least 45 people have been killed in a landslide that swamped three villages after heavy rain in India's northern Uttarakhand state, an official said yesterday.

The landslide swept down a steep slope in Pithoragarh district in the early hours of Saturday.

"We can confirm 45 deaths," senior administration official NS Negi told AFP by phone.

Twenty bodies were pulled from the debris after the landslide Saturday buried the villages in Pithoragarh district of Uttarakhand state, said SM Shamim, a paramilitary force commander.

Police and volunteers were digging through mud and rocks Sunday to recover the bodies of 23 others, he said.

Rescue teams were searching through the mud and rocks for the other fatalities, Negi said.

The remote, hilly region was lashed by annual monsoon rain before the landslides occurred. Pithoragarh, in the Himalayan foothills, is about 500km northeast of the Indian capital, New Delhi. Extensive deforestation has made the region prone to landslides during monsoon rains.

Pak Taliban battle for succession

AFP, Islamabad

Pakistan's Taliban appeared in turmoil yesterday after reports of a deadly shootout between contenders to replace the shadowy movement's leader, who is believed to have been killed in a US drone attack.

Intelligence officials said Friday that Baitullah Mehsud, who had a five-million-dollar bounty on his head, was killed in the US missile attack. Pakistan's government says it is still seeking confirmation.

There were then unconfirmed reports of a deadly shooting at a meeting of top Taliban commanders who convened to discuss the choice of a successor to Mehsud.

Interior Minister Rehman Malik said the reports from the meeting in the lawless region of South Waziristan were being investigated.

The commanders were reportedly

Mehsud and the warlord's main spokesman, and Wali-ur Rehman, a senior commander in Mehsud's umbrella Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) movement.

"We have reports that there was fighting between Wali-ur Rehman and Hakimullah... I said earlier that one of them is dead. I will not disclose the name. I am seeking verification," Malik told private Pakistani TV channel Geo.

"The (shooting) incident took place on Friday and I said in the National Assembly the same day that there was internal fighting between Wali-ur Rehman and Hakimullah," he said.

However, someone claiming to be Hakimullah Mehsud called up media outlets on Saturday to claim that Baitullah Mehsud was still alive. The two men are part of the same tribe.
