Modern day job titles

In a bizarre attempt to make employees' roles appear more important, new titles have replaced "dinner ladies" and "call centre workers", a study has found.
Among many, paperboys have been changed to Media Distribution Officer, call centre workers to Front Line Customer Support Facilitator, the research found.
Also, tollbooth collectors have been elevated to "Coin Facilitation Engineers", The Telegraph reported.
As per a survey of British workers, even dishwashers have been promoted to "Gastronomical Hygiene Technicians" by their employers.
The list of titles was compiled by market research company OnePoll.com after researchers carried out a four-month online survey of thousands of staff and employers who provided their unusual titles.
A spokesman said: "These job titles are absolutely barmy. Some have been bubbling around for a few years but now the practice of dreaming up such title seems to have gone into overdrive.
"I wonder whether deep down the people who occupy these positions are happy with them."
