

Withdraw reservation on CEDAW articles

Speakers urge govt

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Speakers at a discussion yesterday urged the government to withdraw its reservation on articles 2 and 16.1.GA of Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) to eliminate all sorts of discrimination against women as well as to establish equal rights regarding guardianship of children and marriage and divorce before submitting the 6th and 7th periodic government report by December.

Giving the excuse of religious sentiments, the government still keeps the reservation on the articles, depriving half of the country's population of the rights they are entitled to as per international law and the constitution, they added.

Representatives of Citizens' Initiatives on CEDAW Bangladesh, a national platform of 38 rights organisations, held the discussion on 'CEDAW and Bangladesh' at Cirdap auditorium in the city with a call for full implementation of CEDAW.

Although almost 25 years have passed since Bangladesh had signed the convention, the government is yet to approve all the articles of CEDAW, said the speakers.

While submitting the periodic reports, the government always pledges to withdraw the reservation but that never becomes a reality, said noted human rights activist Dr Hamida Hossain in her keynote.

She stressed full implementation of the CEDAW and incorporating the guidelines of CEDAW into national law to ensure equal rights of women, especially regarding ancestral property and children's guardianship.

Emphasising dissemination of the government periodic reports, Bangladesh Mahila Parishad President Ayesha Khanam said it is important to make public who are preparing the report and what does the report actually contain to make the government more accountable.

Referring to the article 7 of CEDAW, Ayesha Khanam said the government should focus more on political rights, especially the issues relating to marginal women because they have little chance to reach the policymaking level.

"Although women in the country are advanced socio-economically, they are still lagging behind in domestic life since we always see women facing discrimination in family life or private life," said Shaheen Anam, executive director of Manusher Jonno Foundation.

She also said that the government should make it clear why it is incapable to cancel the reservation on the specific CEDAW clauses.

The platform also placed a set of demands, including forming a gender equality commission consisting of women lawmakers and representatives from Law Commission and women affairs ministry, appointing more female teachers in all academic institutions and creating women-friendly environment, allocating more funds to women healthcare sector, taking steps to ensure women rights on lands, initiating more agriculture programmes for women, giving women agriculture loan on easy conditions and ratifying the United Nations Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families.

President of Women For Women Salma Khan presided over the discussion also addressed by Farah Kabir, country director of ActionAid Bangladesh, Advocate Salma Ali, executive director of BNWLA, and Ranjan Karmakar, executive director of Steps Towards Development.

TRAFFICKING IN PERSONS

'Drop name of Bangladesh from US watch list'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Human rights activists yesterday expressed their concern at US State Department's annual 'Trafficking in Persons Report 2009' that termed Bangladesh a source and transit country for men, women and children trafficked for the purposes of forced labour and commercial sexual exploitation.

The US should drop the name of Bangladesh from its watch list for the sake of the country's manpower export sector, said Salma Ali, chairman of Action Against Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation of Children (ATSEC), at a press conference at the National Press Club.

In its report, the US State Department placed Bangladesh on the Tier 2 watch list, saying that 'Bangladesh does not comply with the minimum standards for the elimination of trafficking.'

ATSEC Co-chairperson Masud Dhali said the statement that the government did not take any steps to stop human trafficking is wrong.

The rights activists also urged the US State Department should give guidelines on how to stop human trafficking and ensure safe migration, instead of blaming the country for 'insufficient steps to stop human trafficking'.

The Trafficking in Persons Report, which was published on June 16 worldwide, also said that Bangladeshi law enforcement officials identified 251 trafficking victims and referred 204 victims to care facilities run by the government or NGOs.

ATSEC Bangladesh organised the press conference.
