Community participation a must to control malaria

Speakers tell roundtable

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Speakers at a roundtable yesterday said community involvement in controlling malaria from 70 upazilas across the country is imperative and media can play an important role in involving the community by raising awareness in this regard.

Titled 'Malaria control programme: Assistance from mass media', the discussion was jointly organised by Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS), Brac and the daily Shamakal at Brac Centre Inn in the city.

Speaking as the chief guest, DGHS Director General Prof Shah Monir Hossain said strict monitoring as well as supervision is needed for smooth running of malaria control programme and media's role would be helpful to achieve the target.

Bangladesh received Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria (GFATM) grant for Malaria-round 6 to halve the morbidity and mortality related to malaria in 13 high endemic districts by 2012 comparing to that of 2005, he added.

The speakers said in 2005, total malaria cases were 48,647 and the death toll was 502. Though the number of total cases has increased recently, death toll has come down by this time due to awareness and rapid diagnostic tests.

They said some 84,690 people were detected with malaria in 2008 and the death toll was 154 and since July this year, some 35,790 cases were detected with 26 deaths.

Implementation of malaria control activities in high malaria endemic districts is challenging due to the remote and hilly geographical situation with difficult communications, they added.

The speakers suggested involvement of more community health volunteers and workers and setting up more service delivery points to those hard-to-reach areas.

Prof Faiz of Salimullah Medical College said the goal of the programme includes providing quality diagnosis and effective treatment to 80 percent of the malaria cases in 13 high endemic districts, promoting use of insecticide-treated nets or long-lasting insecticidal nets in 80 percent of the households and selective indoor residual spraying for containment of outbreaks.

Executive Editor of the daily Shamakal Abu Sayeed Khan stressed the need to set off community radio service and distribute leaflets, brochures and booklets in local languages to make people aware of the disease and its prevention.

Acting Director of DGHS Dr Azizar Rahman, Prof Imran Bin Yunus of Chittagong Medical College and Hospital, Dr A Mannan Bangali of World Health Organisation, Dr Ridwanur Rahman of Suhrawardy Medical College and Hospital, Dr Rashedul Haque of ICDDR,B, Dr Abdur Raquib, deputy programme manager-malaria and Farook Ahmed of Brac were also present at the programme.
