Print and sculpture exhibition at Zainul Gallery

Woodcut by Farhana Ahmed

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

The duo exhibition of printmaker Farhana Ahmed and sculptor Tanny Dey is now on at Zainul Gallery, Faculty of Fine Arts, Dhaka University. Farhana Ahmed received a Masters in printmaking. She started with watercolour in her primary stage and received acclaim. Afterwards, she concentrated on printmaking and studied the subject. Her woodcut presently delves deep into feminine images and their varied moods and characters, while bearing a tranquil effect.

The medium is very knotty but she has a great intention to work with this medium. Subdued colours and the portrayal of figures are the main traits in her works. Seated, contemplative and working women as well as romantic visages are common features in her works at the exhibition. At times her works look very hazy on account of her overuse of colours and various unfamiliar forms.

Tanny Dey completed her Masters in sculpture from Visva Bharati, Shantiniketan. She was a student of noted Indian artist Goutam Das. She has acquired many techniques and methods from her mentor. Her terracotta works at the exhibition feature infants with varied facial expressions. A number of her works delineate human figures with familiar objects.

Synchronisation between figures and forms give Tanny's works uniqueness. Her creations clearly focus emotions and yearning. The works are small in size but each has a stimulating message. Her sculptures are not form or shape-oriented. "As a realistic sculptor, she frequently returns to everyday life. The sculptor has also used different mediums like stone, steel and metal. Her "Broken Cycle" has a touch of experimentation and the work indicates social and political instability.

The exhibition ends today.

Elizabeth Taylor tweets about heart procedure

AP, Los Angeles

Elizabeth Taylor says she's headed to the hospital for a heart procedure.

The 77-year-old actress tells her followers on Twitter that she is to undergo a "very new" procedure to improve heart function that "involves repairing my leaky valve using a clip device" rather than open-heart surgery.

"Any prayers you happen to have lying around I would dearly appreciate," Taylor wrote Tuesday, adding that she plans to inform her 157,389 Twitter followers when the procedure is complete. She did not say when or where she is having treatment.

A representative for Taylor did not immediately return an e-mail and a phone call seeking comment.

Twitter may be the most common place to find the violet-eyed Oscar winner, who rarely makes public appearances. She was seen twice last month -- at Michael Jackson's private burial and at an AIDS charity event she helped establish decades ago -- after months away from the public eye.

But she can be seen often on Twitter, where she has been contributing regularly since March. She has posted her grief over Michael Jackson's death and personal insights such as "Life without earrings is empty." Taylor also actively supported her friend Kathy Ireland as she competed recently on TV's "Dancing With the Stars."

"He was standing up for art"

Beyonce explains Kanye's VMA outburst

Beyonce Knowles is finally breaking her silence about Kanye West storming the stage at the VMAs to declare that she should have won Best Female Video instead of Taylor Swift.

"Well, I knew his intentions, and I knew he was standing up for art; and he told me before, when they said the nominees, he's like, 'You have this award,'" Beyonce, 28, said at the Billboard Awards over the weekend, when she was named Woman of the Year.

"When they didn't call my name, he was, like, completely shocked," Knowles says. "And when he walked on the stage, I was like, 'No, no, no!' and then he spoke, and I was like, 'Oh, no, no, no!'"

Knowles, who handed the mic over to Swift after winning Video of the Year later that night -- continues, "But in the end, it ended up being a great night, and Taylor Swift did get her moment -- and I didn't have to make an acceptance speech."
