Unity in diversity

Three-day indigenous cultural festival in town

JAMIL MAHMUD

With the slogan "Unity in Diversity", a three-day cultural festival featuring different indigenous groups is being held at the Bangabandhu International Conference Centre. Titled "Cultural Diversity Festival '09", the programme began on December 3 and ends today. The programme has been jointly organised by Chittagong Hill Tracts Development Facility (CHTDF) and United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Cultural programme, and an exhibition and sale of handicrafts and everyday items that are inseparable parts of indigenous lifestyle are the highlights of the festival. Handicrafts, agro products, non-timber forest products, traditional attire and ornaments are on display at the festival, which is drawing a good number of keen visitors everyday.

The organisers informed that the exhibition features over hundred stalls by 13 communities from the hilly areas and 19 communities from the plains. Chakma, Marma, Bawm, Tanchangya, Rakhaine, Tripura, Garo, Santal, Karmakar and other indigenous communities are taking part in the festival.

At one corner of the venue, 12 groups of weavers representing the Chakma, Bawm and Tripura communities have set up their stalls -- demonstrating their traditional weaving techniques. Though the weaving tools look quite similar, they are known by different terms and are used in unique ways to produce clothing. The Chakmas call their loom 'bain', while the Tripuras and Bawms call theirs 'ritani' and 'thiamtham' respectively.

Usually women do the weaving. They produce attires both for men and women known as 'pinan', 'khadi', blankets, shawls, 'fata' etc.

Also on display and sale were traditional foods. Homemade cakes, steamed rice, jam and spicy dishes which the indigenous people consume everyday and prepare for special occasion are a hit with the visitors. Cakes such as 'bini pitha', 'chhyana pitha' and 'bora pitha' are some of the attractions.

The festival features cultural shows and an exhibition featuring indigenous handicrafts, foods and more.

To encourage the indigenous communities -- living in the hilly areas -- to produce their traditional items for a bigger market, CHTDF has arranged an award-giving programme. CHTDF awarded different products based on design, quality, market appeal and originality. Several stalls featuring last year's award winners are also part of the festival.

Ornaments including necklaces, rings and belts seemed to draw women of all ages.

Cultural programme at the Hall of Fame featured dance and music by the artistes of different communities. Through the performances, the artistes demonstrated their respective cultural traditions. On the first day of the festival, artistes of Chakma, Marma, Tanchangya communities (from the hilly regions) as well as the Karmakar group (from the plains) performed.

The exhibition is open from 10am to 8pm, while the cultural show takes place in the evening.

Basement Chaos Theorem: Part 1

A new addition to Bangladeshi underground music

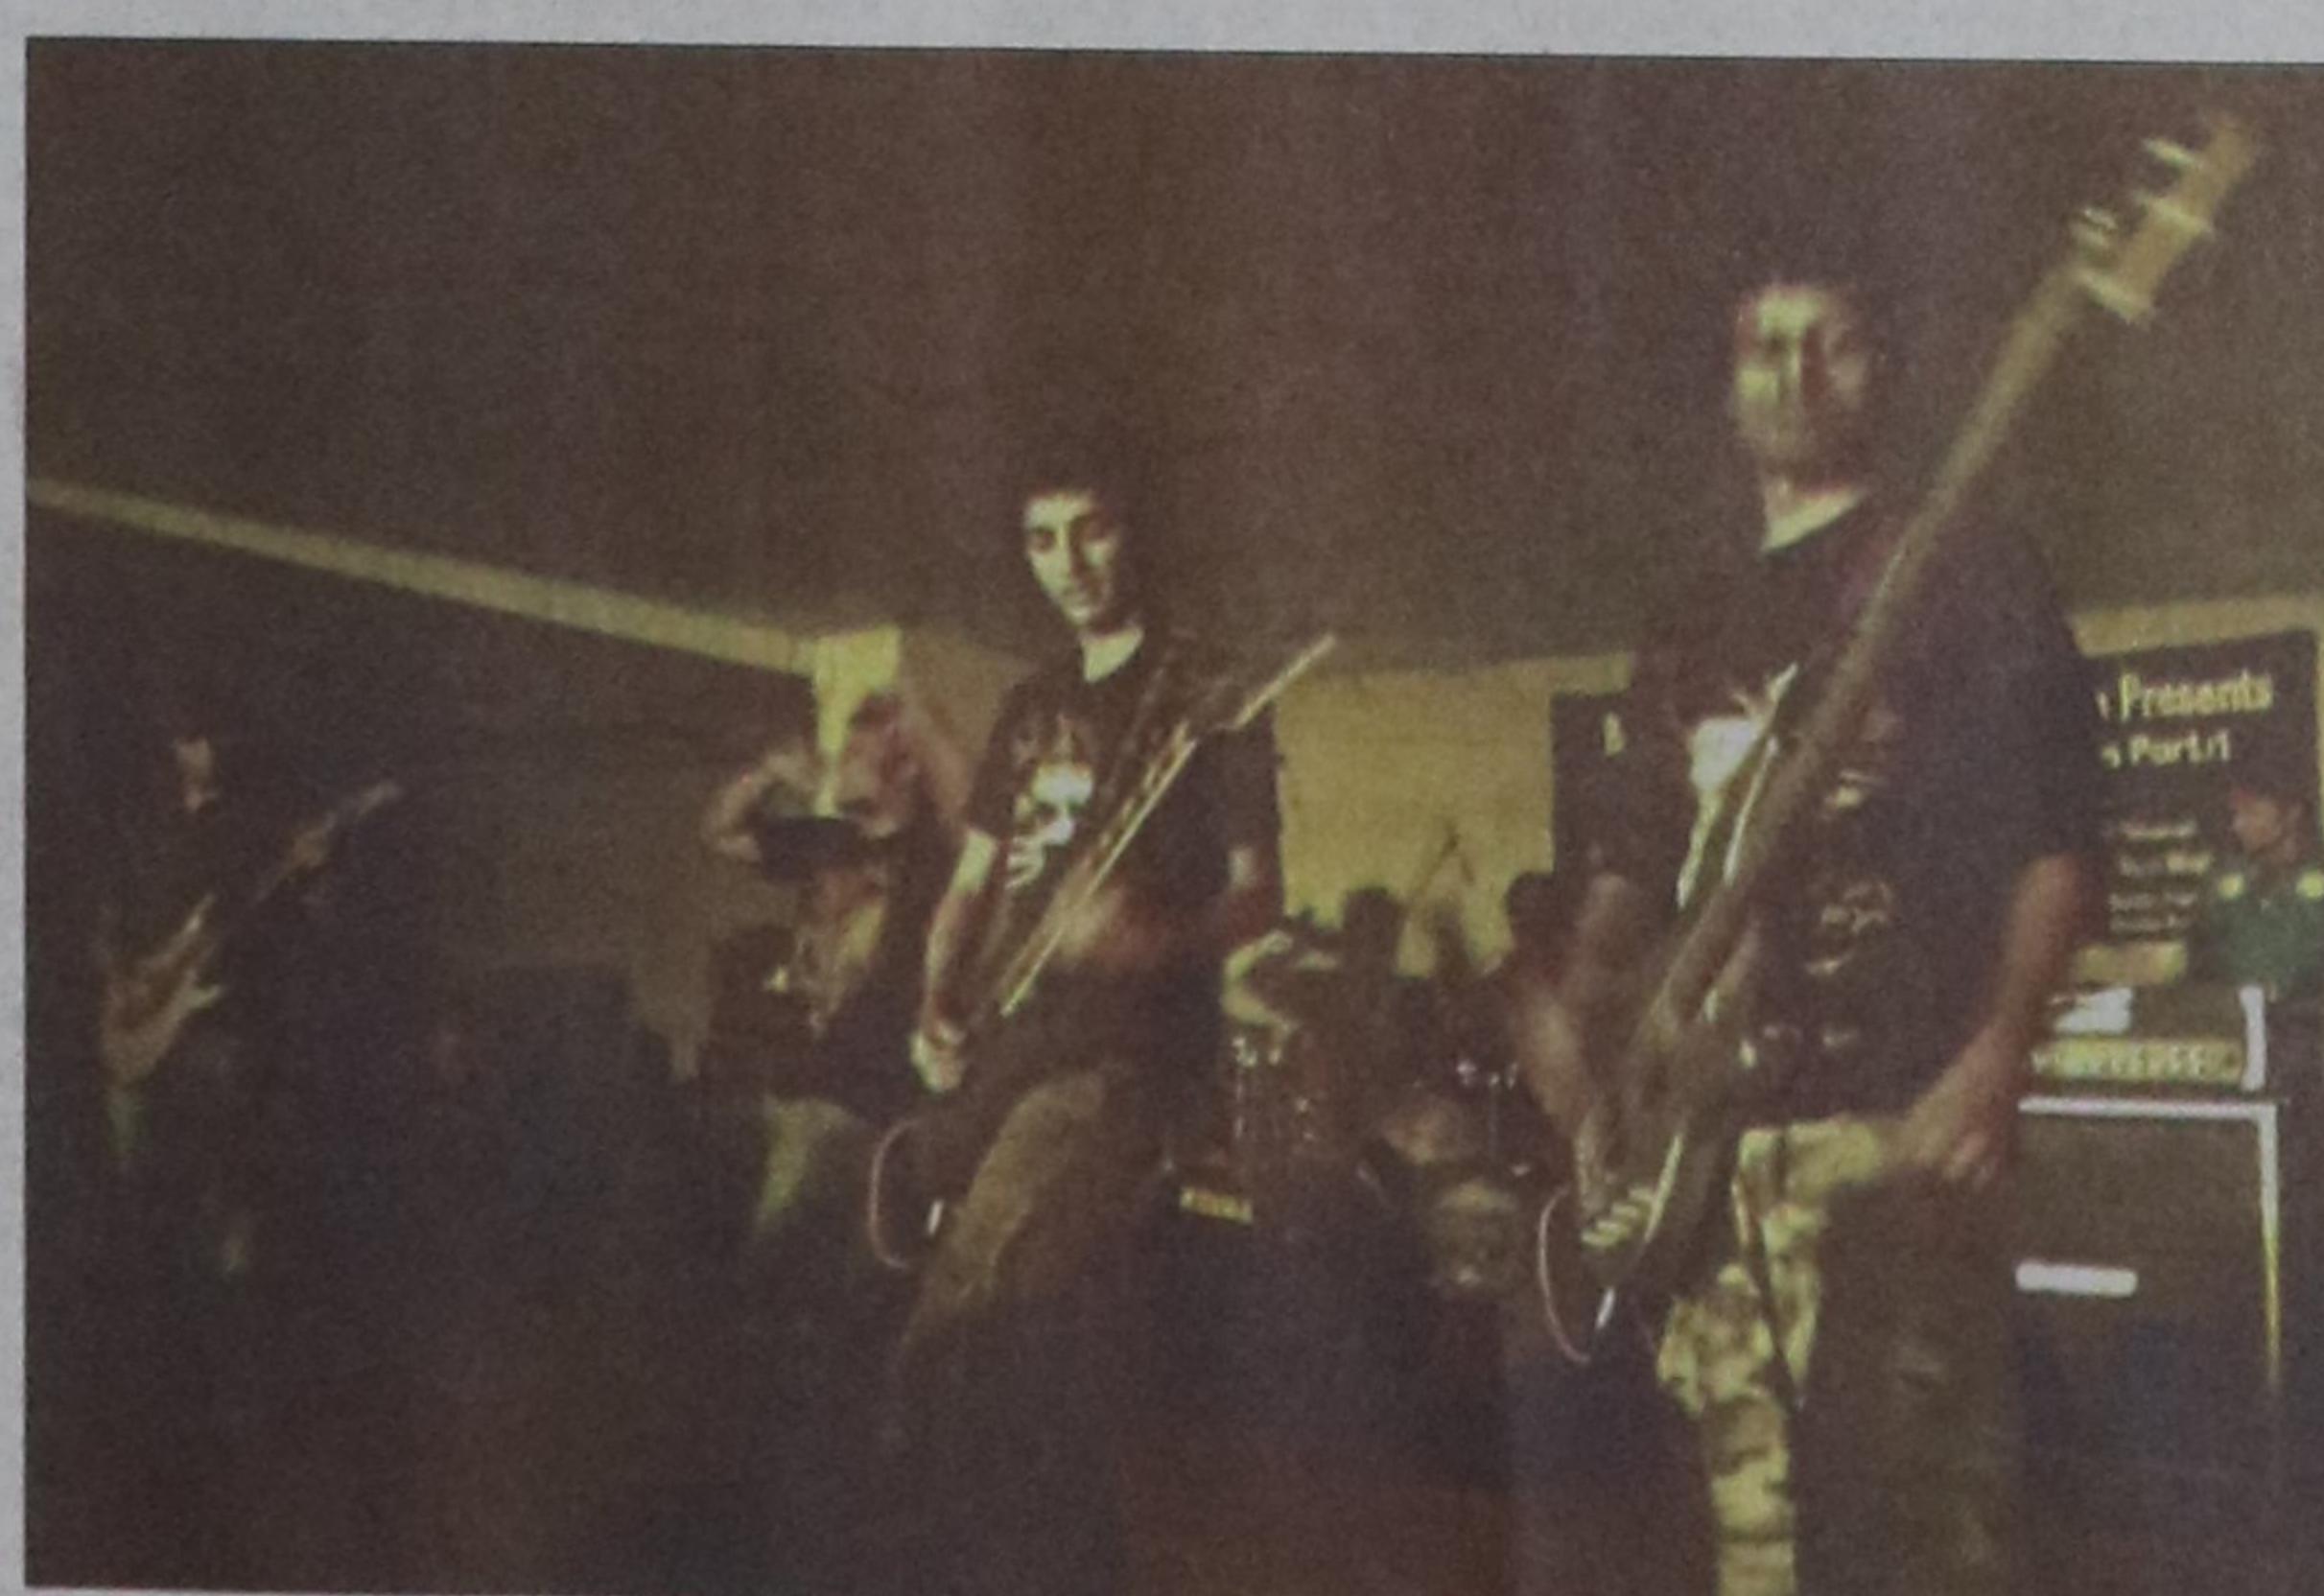

NUSRAT JAHAN PRITOM

Although the underground music scene in the country has been active for a while, 'basement concerts', also known as 'underground concerts' were an unfamiliar phenomenon. The first such concert was held recently in the underground auditorium of Happy Arcade Mall. Bands Mechanix, Severe Dementia, MirrorBlaze, Septentriones, Osiris and Minerva were some of the performers. Basement Event Management along with Minerva organised the show.

Other performing bands were Last Episode, Owned, Sattire, Cadaver and Threshold.

"This is the first show that we had put together," said Tanvir, one of the organisers.

"Most of us come from the college near the shopping mall and when we were hanging out, we conceived this idea," said Shohan of Minerva.

Mechanix, Severe Dementia, MirrorBlaze, Septentriones, Osiris and Minerva were some of the performing bands at the concert.

"I knew the director of the shopping mall and when we approached him with the offer, he consented," said Saimun.

"Special thanks go to Tridib from Mechanix, Nayem from Satanik, Nahan from Severe Dementia and Saimun in helping organise this concert," said Ishmi, Minerva.

"There is mainly one venue that is popular as the 'den' for underground rock so we wanted to shift the scene.

Anyway, although basements concerts are familiar in other countries, we wanted to introduce it here," said Arman of Osiris.

"The mosh pit was crazier than other shows," said Nahan of Severe Dementia.

"We have plans to have more of these shows in the future," said Rafsan of Minerva.
