Rice export banned to keep price stable

Lifting to depend on aman output

REAZ AHMAD

Unsure about this year's aman output, the government has re-imposed ban on rice export to keep the rising domestic rice price under control.

The commerce ministry issued a statutory regulation order (SRO) late last month prohibiting export of both aromatic and non-aromatic rice till the year-end (December 31, 2009) to stabilise rice prices and ensure availability of the staple in the domestic market.

However, unlike three previous occasions when export bans were slapped for six-months at a stretch -- since May last year -- this time government put the embargo only for a brief period with the hope of lifting the ban once it gets a positive aman output report from the field.

The decision came in tandem with

India, one of the major rice-exporting nations that also kept in force a ban on rice export amidst widespread crop failures this year due to one of the worst monsoons in two decades.

India aside, the Philippines is also depending heavily on rice import this year because of crop failures due to back-to-back typhoons.

Justifying the government decision of rice export ban, Food Minister Abdur Razzaque told The Daily Star yesterday that reports were being gathered from the fields to ascertain the prospect of aman output for the sake of domestic food security.

Like India farmers in Bangladesh too failed to transplant rain-fed aman seedlings in time due to late arrival of monsoon this year.

A very late monsoon in September

October gave them, however, a slim chance to redeem aman prospect with the government stepping timely to provide the rice growers with free supply of power to irrigate lands.

Sources at the ministry of commerce, food and agriculture confirmed that wholesale ban was imposed -- irrespective of rice being aromatic or non-aromatic -- because, by taking advantage of permission to export aromatic rice, a section of dishonest exporters tend to export non-aromatic finer quality rice too.

"We've a stock of a little over one million metric tonne (MT) of rice in hand but to further consolidate the food security position we need to know the aman position. Teams are out in the field to make an estimate of aman output," said Razzaque.

EU strongly supports new climate funds for vulnerable nations

100b Euros estimated for mitigation, adaptation by 2020

UNB, Brussels

The European Union (EU) has estimated total incremental costs of mitigation and adaptation to climate change in developing countries, including Bangladesh, at around 100 billion Euros annually by 2020 under a global agreement expected to emerge at the UN climate conference in Copenhagen.

Officials at the EU headquarters told a group of visiting Bangladeshi journalists on Thursday that a big debate ahead of the Copenhagen conference is on how to arrange the money for establishing a dedicated fund for the countries like Bangladesh that are extremely exposed to the global warming.

They said many developed countries are proposing different figures of money for mitigation and adaptation. British Prime Minister Gordon Brown proposed 800 million Pounds for 2010-12. Japan also proposed a substantial fund of $9 billion.

Barbara Helfferich, a spokesperson for the EU Commission on Environment, said the EU contribution to the international public finance will be between 2 billion and 15 billion Euros per year by 2020 for adaptation in developing countries.

She said the EU stresses the need for a deal in Copenhagen on "fast start" international public financial support for developing countries, particularly the Least Developed Countries as

Nepal holds cabinet meet at Mt Everest

Talks danger of global warming

AP, Syangboche

Nepal's top politicians strapped on oxygen tanks yesterday and held a Cabinet meeting amid the frigid, thin air of Mount Everest to highlight the danger global warming poses to glaciers, ahead of next week's international climate change talks.

The government billed the stunt as the world's highest Cabinet meeting. The ministers posed for pictures, signed a commitment to tighten environmental regulations and expand the nation's protected areas, and then quickly flew away.

"The Everest declaration was a message to the world to minimize the negative impact of climate change on Mount Everest and other Himalayan mountains," Prime Minister Madhav Kumar Nepal later said.

Scientists say the Himalayan glaciers are melting at an alarming rate, creating lakes with walls that could burst and flood villages below. Melting ice and snow also make the routes for mountaineers less stable and more difficult to follow.

Getting the ministers to the mountain safely required extensive planning.

The prime minister, his two deputy prime ministers and the 20 Cabinet ministers were examined by doctors before boarding helicopters to Kalapathar, a flat area at an altitude of 17,192 feet (5,250 meters) next to Everest base camp, the jumping point for climbers seeking to scale the peak.

The Himalayan Rescue Association's Bikram Neupane said the politicians bundled in thick jackets, windproof gear and woolen

DCC starts marking road lanes in city

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Dhaka City Corporation started demarcating lanes on important thoroughfares of the capital under the supervision of Dhaka Metropolitan Police (traffic) late Thursday night. The demarcation of lanes started on Kazi Nazrul Islam Avenue at Shahbagh and would eventually move on to other important streets of the capital.

Officials concerned said the fast lane of these streets will be for cars, microbuses, jeeps and similar vehicles, the middle lane for minibuses, buses, covered vans, trucks and such automobiles while the slow lane will be for CNG-run auto rickshaws, pickup vans, taxis, motorbikes and similar vehicles.

From December 8, motorists failing to maintain lanes while using these streets will be fined. Changing lanes illegally would cost a motorist Tk 1,000 in fine and suspension of the driving licence.
