

Gharial on the verge of extinction

Survey begins to find out breeding adults

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Gharial (Gavialis gangeticus), one of the three crocodilian species found in the wild in Bangladesh, is on the verge of extinction and it is presumed that there are no breeding adults in the wild.

Gharials are a natural heritage of Bangladesh and a flagship species for the aquatic/riverine habitat.

The Centre for Advanced Research in Natural Resources & Management (CARINAM) has started a survey to find out the breeding population of gharials in Bangladesh. The project is supported by Mohamed bin Zayed Species Conservation Fund (MBZ), Abu Dhabi, UAE.

With permission from the Forest Department, CARINAM has started gharial survey in the Padma and Jamuna rivers. The survey team has recently visited the Padma from Charhat to Hakimpur, Godagari (close to Indian border) and Jamuna

The politics and lobbying has made the people to believe that species loss is not a threat to their survival, thus leading to the loss of species at a faster rate than presumed. This need to be changed and priority actions targeted to protect and conserve the species and their habitats should be chalked out for implementation," it added.

CARINAM has requested the people having any information about the sighting of adult breeding gharials anywhere in Bangladesh to contact its Chief Executive Dr SMA Rashid on mobile phone (01717-318906) or via e-mail: carinam95@yahoo.com.

The other two species of crocodiles -- freshwater crocodile or mugger (Crocodylus palustris), which is no more found in the wild, and the saltwater crocodiles (Crocodylus porosus), found only in the Sunderbans, -- are also declining due to various factors such as habitat destruction, disturbances by humans, including capture of young hatchlings by fishermen.

CCC, CDA assure support for developing AUW campus

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Cig

Chittagong City Corporation (CCC) and Chittagong Development Authority (CDA) on Friday assured Asian University for Women (AUW) of all-out support for developing its main campus.

Mayor ABM Mohiuddin Chowdhury and CDA Chairman Abdus Salam at a 'Students' Night' programme also assured the AUW authorities of support to construct a loop road of Bayezid Bostami and Dhaka-Chittagong highway bypassing the university.

AUW Support Foundation Bangladesh Board of Directors Chairman Rokia Afzal Rahman and AUW Fund Raising Committee Chairman Janet Montag, who also led the 35-member panel of international supporters of the university on a three-day visit to Bangladesh, also addressed the programme at main campus site at North Pahartali.

Absence of the loop road stood in the way of developing the campus of AUW, an Asian citadel of women education, the speakers noted.

Terming the university a 'milestone', Janet Montag said AUW is being constructed with the support of a number of individual philanthropists from different countries, including the USA, Italy, Hong Kong, Australia, Thailand, Japan and Kuwait.

At the beginning of the journey of AUW, regional cooperation started fostering as students being educated here would stand hand in hand softly reaching friendship and harmony across the globe, she observed.

Terming AUW an invaluable asset of Chittagong as well as of the country, the CCC mayor said any problem that stands in the way of establishing the university would be solved. People are ready to sacrifice anything for the implementation of the university.

Mohiuddin urged the AUW authority to start the construction work of the permanent campus immediately.

The CDA chairman said the problems that are being discussed are no longer major ones since Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina as the chief patron of the university was monitoring everything regarding its establishment.

Salam expressed the CDA's intent to present a part of the under-construction connecting road that goes through the university to its authorities as a gift.

AUW started its academic calendar with a preparatory Access Academy Programme on its temporary campus housed in five rented buildings on Dampara MM Ali Road in the port city on April 6 last year.

Access Academy Programme, an 18-month full scholarship programme sponsored by Goldman Sachs Foundation, has been designed to provide a bridge for admission into AUW that requires additional preparation.

It began with the total enrolment of 129 students from Bangladesh, Cambodia, India, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka while the number of students now rose to more than 300.

The university was expected to shift to its main campus at a hill-beset picturesque site of the city's North Pahartali by the year 2010.

AUW was ready to go through all the procedures maintaining strictly all the environmental and planning parameters required for developing structures for its campus over 131.37 acres of land, including 104.40 acres donated by the government.

As the campus site comprised rolling hills, deep valleys, permanent and intermittent streams, the authorities had to take permission for re-profiling of hills spreading over 47 acres of land for developing the campus as per the world famous design consultant Moshe Safdie and Associates.

The campus needed building construction permit for 14,40,000 square feet in all phases. The concerned Hill Cutting Committee also gave the AUW authorities hill re-profiling (hill-cutting) permission after discussing thoroughly every aspect of building construction, planning and hill re-profiling plans at a meeting on November 17 last year.

But before going to start developing the campus, it became necessary to construct a loop road making diversion of Dhaka-Chittagong Highway-Bayezid Bostami Connecting Road by the north side of the university.

Responding to the need of AUW, CDA also made a DPP (Development Project Proforma) to construct the loop road at an estimated cost of over Tk 19.68 crore. The main objective of the road, which was to be completed by June 2009, was to protect the university from traffic hazards.

But the loop road project got caught in different complexities to delay the process of developing the AUW main campus till date.

Project Director of AUW permanent campus Mostak Habib said infrastructure of the university would be implemented in three phases.

Two academic buildings would be constructed first where 800 students could study, he said, adding that around 3,000 students would be able to study after completion of the project. He hoped that the construction work would be started from the first week of January.

At the function, a colourful cultural programme was held where the students performed with the spirit of spreading and sharing cultural essence and taking talents beyond the geographical boundaries.

Standing shoulder to shoulder, the students also performed by upholding their rich cultural heritage and bringing the messages of goodwill.
