Pakistani security personnel are deployed in violence-affected areas in Karachi on Tuesday. Security officials say up to 48 political party workers have been killed in Karachi since last week, when the headless body of a worker from the city's main political party, the Muttahida Qaumi Movement (MQM), was discovered.

Resolution against US airport screening passed in Pakistan ANI, Peshawar

The assembly of Pakistan's North West Frontier Province has passed an unanimous resolution, asking the federal government to tell Washington to immediately stop screening Pakistani citizens at US airports.

The Daily Times quoted Leader of Opposition Akram Khan Durani as saying that the screening process was a violation of human rights and that American officials were humiliating Pakistani citizen at their airports without any reason.

"The screening of Pakistani citizens should be stopped forthwith," said Durani, who is also the parliamentary leader of the Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam-Fazl (JUI-F).

2009 deadliest year for Afghan civilians: UN

AFP, Kabul

The number of civilians killed in the Afghan war jumped last year to 2,412, making 2009 the deadliest year for ordinary Afghans since the US-led invasion, the United Nations said yesterday.

The vast majority of the dead were killed in Taliban attacks, the UN's Mission for Afghanistan (UNAMA) said. By comparison, 2,118 civilians were killed in 2008.

"The intensification and spread of the armed conflict in Afghanistan continued to take a heavy toll on civilians throughout 2009," the report said.

Last year was also the deadliest for foreign forces fighting the Taliban, with 520 troop deaths, up from 295 for the year before, as the insurgency has escalated and spread from the southern provinces where it began soon after the Taliban regime was overthrown in the 2001 invasion.

The UN report said 70 percent of last year's civilian deaths, or 1,681, were in insurgent attacks, while pro-government forces including Nato and US troops were responsible for 25 percent, or 596 civilian deaths last year.

Another 135 civilians were killed in violence not attributable to the conflicting parties, it said.

"2009 was the worst year in recent times for civilians affected by the armed conflict," the report said, adding: "UNAMA HR (human rights) recorded the highest number of civilian casualties since the fall of the Taliban regime in 2001.

Civilian deaths caused by Western troops fell 28 percent last year compared to the year before, it said, attributing the drop to measures taken specifically to protect civilians.

Commander of the foreign forces in Afghanistan, US General Stanley McChrystal, has made minimising civilian deaths and injuries a central tenet of his counter-insurgency strategy, and has ordered reduced air strikes as one way of achieving this objective. The UN report said the change in Nato forces' command structure, "specific steps to minimize civilian casualties" and "a new tactical directive" by the force contributed to the reduction in non-combatant deaths.

Civilian casualties are a source of tension between the Afghan government of President Hamid Karzai and the international forces fighting the insurgency.

Karzai uses the issue to press home his authority, draw support for his unpopular government while criticising the tactics of the foreign forces.

8 Pak pupils killed as train slams into school bus

AFP, Multan

At least nine people, eight of them children, were killed and 18 others injured on Wednesday when a passenger train hit a bus packed with school children in central Pakistan, officials

The crash took place at an unmanned crossing with no barrier near Mian Channun town, about 100km east of the central city of Multan in Punjab province, which was enveloped in fog at the time.

"The Lahore-bound Jaffer Express collided with a school van, killing nine people including two girls and the driver and wounding 18 others," senior police official Kamran Khan told Mushtaq Ahmad, a senior doctor at the government's main hospital in Mian Channun, said the bodies of seven children and the driver reached his hospital while 18 other people were being treated for injuries.

Officials said the parents of the eighth dead child may have taken the body home for burial.

The primary school children were all aged around eight to 10 years old, and were on their way to class when the accident happened.

Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani ordered an inquiry into the "tragic" incident. "The prime minister expressed deep grief and concern over the tragic road accident in which several school children lost their lives," a statement issued by his office said. Gilani also asked state-owned Pakistan

Railways to "ensure proper vigilance at their unmanned crossings, particularly during times of fog." Pakistan has one of the world's worst records for fatal rail and road accidents, blamed on poor infrastructure, badly maintained vehicles and roads, and reckless driv-

Lanka election violence escalates after killing

AFP, Colombo

Sri Lankan police yesterday broke up clashes between political activists as violence linked to looming presidential polls escalated after gunmen shot dead an opposition party worker.

Tear-gas was fired to disperse thousands of party workers in the eastern town of Polonnaruwa, local officials said by telephone.

About 3,000 opposition supporters destroyed a ruling party office in the town after posters of their favoured presidential candidate, Sarath Fonseka, were destroyed overnight, a police official said.

"It was a mini-war between rival groups," said the official, who declined to be named. At least five people were seriously wounded in the clashes.

The violence came as the government vowed to step up security in the run up to the January 26 election at which President Mahinda Rajapakse is seeking re-election.

Opposition leader Ranil Wickremesinghe accused Rajapakse's People's Alliance of inciting violence and using intimidation to swing voters.

"People linked to the government were behind yesterday's killing," Wickremesinghe told reporters in Colombo. Opposition activist Kusuma Kuruppuarachchi, 60, was gunned down Tuesday as she was travelling in a bus to attend Fonseka's election rally in the southern town of Hungama.

US admits drone attacks intensified in Pakistan

ANI, Washington

US Central Command Chief, General David Petraeus, has acknowledged that there has been an increase in drone attacks on suspected militant targets in the Federally Administered Tribal Areas (Fata) in Pakistan, since the suicide attack at a US base in Khost Province of Afghanistan last week.

The seventh drone attack since the suicide bombing came on Saturday in North Waziristan, part of the tribal area and a region where Washington is pressing Pakistan to launch an offen-

North Waziristan is a refuge for the Taliban and Al-Qaeda, as well as for the Haqqani network, which is considered the most dangerous Afghan insurgent group.

The Pakistani Taliban, the Afghan Taliban and al-Qaeda all have claimed responsibility for the Khost bombing, which killed seven CIA operatives, including the chief of the base, an officer of Jordan's General Intelligence Directorate and the Afghan base security chief at the base.

Petraeus also commented on a video, which shows the triple agent suicide bomber of Jordanian descent, Balawi, sitting beside the former Pakistan Tehrik-i-Taliban leader Hakimullah Mehsud. Balawi claims that he blew himself up to avenge the death of Mehsud in a US drone attack.

"Baitullah Mehsud and his organisation carried out horrific attacks inside Pakistan, and that is what I think should concern the Pakistanis, as certainly it concerns us," The Dawn quoted Petraeus, as saying.

"There will be loss of innocent life in war, but we have got to make sure that we minimise it and that we try to avoid it just about at all costs," he added.

Troops vacates Kashmir hospitals, schools

Infiltration bids up, says Antony

AFP, Indo-Asian News Service, Srinagar/New Delhi The army has vacated all hospital, school and college buildings in Indian Kashmir in a further bid to lower its profile in the volatile region, Defence Minister AK Antony said yesterday.

He also revealed that India's home ministry had ordered federal police to take over security of a key road connecting the Kashmiri summer capital Srinagar with the rest of India from the military. The 300-kilometre (186 mile) highway -- a main conduit for military convoys -- winds through the Himalayan foothills and is prone to militant attacks.

"This has been done to reduce the visibility of the army, without in anyway diluting out counter-militant grid," said Antony, who was on a visit to review the security situation in the region. Infiltration attempts from Pakistan into Jammu and Kashmir were on the rise, Antony said

Wednesday, a day after returning from the state. "In 2009, infiltration declined but the attempts of infiltration are going up. It is of serious nature... The enemy across the border... they do not want the situation to be normal," Antony told reporters on the sidelines of a seminar here. He said there were more infiltration attempts as the state approached normalcy. Meanwhile, Border Security Force (BSF) troopers opened fire on suspected militants early Wednesday in Jammu and Kashmir's Kanachak sector and foiled an infiltration bid, a BSF official BSF patrolling party sighted a group of militants entering Kanachak sector, about 35 km west of Jammu, close to the international border fence, and opened fire on them. The fire was opened to keep the infiltrators off the fence and to stall their intrusion bid. "There was fire from Pakistani side. It is difficult to say if these were Pakistani Rangers or the militants as the visibility was almost zero," a BSF official told IANS. A 20-year insurgency against Indian rule in the region has claimed more than 47,000 lives.
