

WILFUL PEDESTRIANS

Jaywalking has become almost the norm in the capital. Instead of the pavement, a large number of pedestrians use the traffic lanes to walk, cross the street when they are not supposed to, scale central reservations to get across, refuse to use foot bridges and often cross streets running, putting both their and the motorists' lives in danger. Pedestrians not following the rules overwhelm traffic police whose attempts to contain their unruly behaviors seldom produce result.

Photo: SHAFIQU ALAM

