Dipali Bhattacharya's solo exhibition

Artworks by Dipali Bhattacharya.

TAKIR HOSSAIN

Dipali Bhattacharya is an Indian painter who has found a following in the Bangladeshi art scene. Her current solo painting exhibition, titled "A Shifting Weave of Memory" is now on at Bengal Gallery of Fine Arts, Dhanmondi. The artist has had another exhibition in Dhaka previously.

One of Dipali's most distinctive features is that her images are comforting. Her paintings could be termed as formal, and classically beautiful. She captures individual moods in their varied perspectives and situations. Her works are very polished and have a touch of photographic impression. The women in Dipali's paintings have been visualised with an emotional resonance. Eyes are an important feature in her works. Viewers may also discover many characters from fiction and movies in the paintings.

On one hand, the paintings document history, and on the other depict contemporary Kolkata life.

One could say that the origins of the paintings are deeply rooted in the soul, in experiences and emotions that have been deposited in the nooks of mind. Using imagery with grace, Dipali has created works that are expressive and aesthetically opulent.

Dipali's intimate study of people allows her to get to the core of her themes. She has tried to explore her subjects' emotions and views. Her paintings are seemingly sophisticated, yet uncomplicated.

She is also a keen observer of her city's changes, refinement and development. Nostalgia and historical aspects also get priority in her paintings.

For Dipali, space is almost as significant as architectural forms and shapes. Flowers, birds, small plants are recurring objects in her works. She has tried to utilise every inch of space with soft colours, human expressions and rich textures.

Dipali graduated from the Govt. College of Arts and Crafts, Kolkata in 1974. She has had thirteen solo exhibitions in Kolkata, Bangalore, New Delhi, Dhaka, Stuttgart and Singapore. She has also participated in numerous group exhibitions in India and other countries. Presently she is the principal of the Govt. College of Arts and Crafts, Kolkata, India.

The exhibition ends on March 16.
