Police to ensure HR in UN missions: Dipu

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Police officers working in the United Nation's peacekeeping missions will uphold the highest democratic principles of policing ensuring human rights of people, especially during arrest and detention, said Foreign Minister Dipu Moni.

"They (police in peacekeeping missions) will uphold the highest democratic principles of policing. The formed police units (FPUs) will ensure basic human rights of people, especially during arrest and detention."

The foreign minister said this as the chief guest at the concluding session of the five-day meeting of Doctrine Development Group (DDG) on FPUs at a city hotel yesterday.

The meeting was jointly organised by Bangladesh Police and the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations.

Dipu said Bangladesh is committed to maintaining peace across the world and has been making important contribution to the peacekeeping missions abroad.

Inspector General of Police

Nur Mohammad and Head of Standing Police Capacity Brig Gen Walter Wolf also spoke.

The DDG meeting was organised for the third time aimed at developing a uniform curriculum for FPUs in pre-deployment training. A total of 52 participants from 35 countries participated in the meeting.

Currently, FPU contingents follow curricula developed by their own countries before joining the peacekeeping missions. So, the standards vary from one country to another.
