The arrest of Taliban leaders has had a "negative impact" on peace talks between the Afghan government and the insurgents, a spokesman for President Hamid Karzai said yesterday.

The recent arrests in Pakistan of the Taliban's second-in-command, Mullah Abdul Ghani Baradar, and others in the Islamists' hierarchy, slowed down Afghan government initiatives to broker peace, Siamak Hirawi told AFP.

"We confirm the negative impact of the arrests on the peace process that the Afghan government has initiated," said Hirawi, Karzai's deputy spokesman.

His was the first official confirmation from the disrupt reconciliation efforts with the group.

US allows India to quiz Mumbai attack kingpin

AFP, New Delhi

The United States will permit India to question a Chicago man who has admitted scoping out sites for the deadly 2008 Mumbai attacks, Home Minister P Chidambaram said yesterday.

The assurance came following a telephone conversation between Chidambaram and US Attorney General Eric Holder on Friday, the minister said in New Delhi.

"It is my understanding that India would be able to obtain access to David Coleman Headley to question him in a properly constituted judicial proceeding," Chidambaram said inastatement.

"Such judicial proceedings could be either pre-trial or during an inquiry or trial (and) it is also my understanding that Headley is obliged to cooperate fully and truthfully in such proceedings," he said.

Headley pleaded guilty Thursday to 12 terrorism charges after US prosecutors agreed not to seek the death penalty or to allow the suspect to be extradited to India.

"The conversation (with Holder) has clarified a number of aspects concerning the plea agreement," Chidambaram added.

The Washington-born son of a former Pakistani diplomat and American woman, Headley spent two years casing out Mumbai ahead of the November 2008 attacks by 10 Islamist gunmenthat left 166 people dead.

AFP, Quetta/ Karachi

Gunmen have shot dead seven people in separate incidents in Pakistan's restive southwest, police said yesterday.

At least three Shia Muslims were killed on Saturday when two men riding a motorbike opened fire on the outskirts of Quetta, the capital of oil and gas rich Baluchistan, which borders Iran and Afghanistan.

"All three men died on the spot," senior police official Tariq Manzoor told AFP.

In another incident, three people including a student and two employees of Mastung cadet college were killed in a drive-by shooting on Friday.

They were returning to Quetta from Mastung town, 55km south of the provincial capital, when gunmen riding a motorbike opened fire on their vehicle.

"Two employees of the college died on the spot while the student succumbed to injuries on the way to hospital," local police official Mohammad Alam said.

Pakistani students and mourners gather at a hospital receiving bodies of victims of shooting in Quetta yesterday and chant slogans against the deadly attack. Gunmen shot dead seven people in separate incidents in Pakistan's restive southwest on Friday.

Manmohan asks state govts to look into death of tigers

PALLAB BHATTACHARYA, New Delhi

Concerned over death of tigers in reservatories, Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh has decided to personally take up the matter with state governments.

Environment Minister Jairam Ramesh yesterday said that the prime minister has expressed his concern regarding tiger deaths in the reserves during a meeting of National Board for Wildlife held on Thursday.

Pointing at 60 tiger deaths last year, the minister said "a conspiracy" has been hatched by mining and estate mafia with the support of some politicians. "The prime minister has agreed to lend the weight of his office for monitoring state governments' reserves. He will also take up the matter with the chief ministers of various states", he said.

"It is a very alarming matter to become worried that 60 tigers died last year against the average mortality of 30 reported in the past. These are not accidents."

US weighs more troops for north Afghanistan chief of staff of the Nato-led

AFP, Washington

US commanders may send an off the Taliban in northern Afghanistan, a region that had been relatively peaceful until recently, a defence official said Friday. US officers were conferring with German commanders leading Regional Command North about shifting some the forces in a US troop buildup to the north instead of the south, the official told AFP. The "tentative" plan was for roughly 2,500 American troops, including trainers for Afghan security forces, to deploy to the north, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. President Barack Obama approved the deployment of 30,000 additional troops in December to turn the war around, and most of the 10,000 that have arrived so far have been sent to the volatile south, the spiritual heartland of the Taliban insurgency.

Plans for a possible shift of forces emerged after a senior German general said the Natoled force was planning an offensive in the northern Kunduz province.

General Bruno Kasdorf,

International Security and Assistance Force, told German additional 2,500 troops to fend ARD public radio Thursday the operation would be "similar" to the offensive currently underway in the southern province of Helmand involving 15,000 US, Nato and Afghan troops.

Compared to the south, violence is still relatively low in the north, but Taliban forces have stepped up attacks in the area in recent months and tried to disrupt vital Nato supply routes from neighbouring Uzbekistan that run through Kunduz, officials said.

Another defence official said the Taliban, which has its roots in the Pashtun community, is seeking to expand its reach across the country and tended "to focus on the Pashtun pockets in the north."

But he said the centre of gravity in the war, for the insurgents and for Nato-led forces, remained in the south, where US reinforcements have poured in since Obama ordered the surge of American forces.

Germany has around 4,300 troops in Afghanistan, the third-largest contingent after the United States and Britain.

Kashmir to assess water loss due to treaty with Pakistan

INDO-ASIAN NEWS SERVICE, Iammu

The Jammu and Kashmir government will hire a private agency to assess water losses suffered by the state due to the Indus Water Treaty provisions that restrict the use of its three rivers.

Official sources said Friday the state cannot harness the waters of the Jhelum, Indus and Chenab as much as it would have liked to because of the restrictions.

Under the 1960 World Bank-brokered treaty, India has got complete control over the waters of three rivers -Ravi, Sutlej and Beas - that flow into Pakistan through Punjab.

In exchange, Pakistan has the right to monitor the usage of all the three rivers of Jammu and Kashmir.
