

CRISES CRITICAL

POWER and gas crises hit the industrial sector hard. Factories have started to limp and workers remain idle while women fall back to cooking by burning wood. Power failure also disrupts dispensing of fuel at filling stations and intensifies the already bad water crisis. The cost of running generators is taking a toll on small businesses. Amid this power, water and gas crises, the government asked all to keep their air conditioners off during peak hours and keep room temperature not lower than 25 degrees Celsius during off peak hours.
