Oil rises in Asia on US outlook

Oil prices reversed earlier losses in Asian trade yesterday after rallying in New York on expectations of better demand, spurred by an upbeat outlook on the US economy, analysts said. New York's main futures contract, light sweet crude for delivery in July, rose 23 cents to $74.61 a barrel while Brent North Sea crude was up six cents to $74.33.

"The market went close to $75 in the New York session and I think that was a pretty strong resistance level for the market," said Clarence Chu, a Singapore-based oil trader with Hudson Capital Energy. "Last week we tested $75 a couple of times but since then, the market has been going back down. So I see it as the market hit a resistance at 75 (dollars)," he told AFP.
