A mirror on reality

Solo exhibition of Sigmar Polke's works

TAKIR HOSSAIN

Sigmar Polke was one of the illustrious painters on the contemporary German art scene. He passed away on June 10, 2010. Polke was an artist whose work defies easy descriptions. He was one of the most significant painters of the post-World War II generation. With his demise, Germans lost a great painter.

Goethe Institut Bangladesh is honouring the deceased painter by bringing a collection of 40 gouaches by Polke to Bangladesh. The solo exhibition, titled "Music from an Unknown Source," is now being held at The German Cultural Centre gallery in Dhanmondi, Dhaka.

Polke did not confine himself only to painting; he did prints, gouache, drawings, graphic design and mixed media works. He was also a well-known photographer.

Polke's works are mainly drawing-based and he could easily depict agony, physiological journey and inner vision through portraits. His used scribbles in his works.

About Polke, veteran Bangladeshi artist Rafiqun Nabi said, "Since the early 1960s, Polke had experimented with a wide range of styles and subjects, bringing together imagery from contradictory and unexpected sources, both past and modern, and using a variety of different materials and techniques. He was multi-talented. His working style and approach may appear simple but convey his mastery. He made a personal hallmark through his creations and many expressionist painters in Germany are now following his styles and techniques. He amassed an indescribable abundance of figurative and abstract imagery."

"We are elated that a Polke exhibition is being held here. This exhibition will inspire artists, critics and art enthusiasts, especially young painters who are keen on experimental works."

Polke's paintings have a delicate touch of reality with focused projection. His works denote social injustice and inhumanity. He had an inborn sense of colour, which makes his works lively and expressive. Dots form figures and their distinct movements in Polke's works. At the exhibition, his gouache-based works highlight human forms in contemplative and joyful moods.

In 1963 Polke founded the painting movement 'Capitalistic Realism.' It is an anti-style of art, appropriating the pictorial shorthand of advertising.

Polke addressed religious bigotry, ignorance, political and social discrimination through his caricatures. His works shed light on varied socio-political and economic crises in the German society. Polke's artistic diversity, and his resistance to any form of categorisation, has been seen as the only consistent theme in his work.

The exhibition will continue till August 2.

Priyobhashini's solo show begins today

A CORRESPONDENT

Bengal Gallery of Fine Arts organised a press conference on the occasion of a solo sculpture exhibition titled "Sylvan Forms" of Ferdousi Priyobhashini on July 18 at the Bengal's café. The exhibition begins today at the Bengal Gallery in Dhanmondi and will continue till July 28.

Priyobhashini is one of the noted self-taught sculptors of our country. Her works are very intimately connected with nature and people. She uses twigs, branches, roots, brushwood and dry trees in her sculptural works. Her works demonstrate human figures, birds, marine animals, doors, windows, huts and various familiar and unfamiliar forms.

Priyobhashini was born in 1948. She was a valiant freedom fighter. She received the Shadhinota Padak in 2010. She has so far held 10 solo exhibitions in the country and abroad.

Ferdousi Priyobhashini (2-R) speaks at the press conference.

Those who spoke at the press conference were Subir Chowdhury, director of Bengal Gallery; sculptor Ferdousi Priyobhashini and Sarwar Jahan, manager of Bengal Gallery of Fine Arts.

Metallica say 2004 documentary was a mistake

It's been six years since the Metallica documentary "Some Kind of Monster" hit theatres, but the band is still sharing its reactions to the movie, which chronicled the band's bitter infighting and visits to a therapist while working on St. Anger. Their impressions? Not good. "Every time I see Noel Gallagher he quotes lines from that movie back to me," Ulrich told Australia's Herald Sun.

"That thing has taken on a life of its own. The whole thing was a mistake. I am aware a lot of other musicians seem to have lived a lot of those moments. They weren't necessarily stupid enough to film them like we were and share them with the rest of the world."

Despite Metallica's squabbling earlier this decade, Ulrich says they've been getting along better than ever-- they're already mapping out plans to prep their follow-up to 2008's "Death Magnetic." "There is a good vibe in the band now, everyone's having fun and getting along," Ulrich said. "Things are real easy and borderline pleasant. I know that doesn't sound very rock and roll, but it would surprise me if it'd be a year before we start making a new album.

There's a good chance the turnaround would be less than it's been on previous cycles."

Before heading back into the studio, Metallica will finish up a string of dates in Australia in the fall and performed on June 22 in Sofia, Bulgaria as part of the Big Four tour alongside thrash icons Megadeth, Slayer and Anthrax.

A programme dedicated to Sigmar Polke

The Goethe-Institut Bangladesh has organised a slide presentation and discussion, "The Sorcerers' Sources, Sigmar Polke and his magic laboratory" today at 6.30 pm. Dr. Justin Jonas, curator of the Academy of Fine Arts Of Johannes-Gutenberg University Mainz, Germany, will conduct the presentation, says a press release. Dr. Jonas will give an insight into the striking works of the recently deceased Polke and the artist's most important and well-known works since the early 1960s. The venue: Auditorium at Goethe-Institut Bangladesh, House 10, Road 9 (new),

Dhanmondi R/A, Dhaka.

Goethe-Institut is also offering tours and discussions run by art experts for the students of its German Language Partner Schools (PASCH) and the students of the University of Liberal Arts Bangladesh.

All programmes are in local time. The Daily Star will not be responsible for any change in the programme.
