

Wall Street ends with hope

AFP, New York

Wall Street heads into next week with strong tailwind from recent days' rally and brighter outlook as traders keenly await President Barack Obama to unveil new plans for boosting the shaky US economy.

Last week's slew of economic data, led by a better-than-expected employment report and strong manufacturing numbers, increased optimism that the US economy was on a recovery track, albeit at a slower pace than hoped for.

Traders breathed a sigh of relief on Friday after highly-anticipated Labor Department figures said the US economy lost 54,000 jobs last month, much less than most analysts' expectations.

While unemployment rate rose to 9.6 percent, the private sector created 67,000 new jobs, which together with Wednesday's manufacturing data bolstered a modestly optimistic economic outlook.

"For weeks we had only seen bad news and began developing extremely bleak scenarios of deflation and a second-dip recession, so this was a week of relief," Evariste Lefeuve, an analyst at Natixis North America, told AFP.

With traders returning from Labor Day holiday on Tuesday to a four-day trade week, markets were likely to be choppy as investors continue to take in the passing week's data.

Next week was set to see the release of weekly jobs claims and the trade deficit report, which will offer further indications on the health of the economy.

"The market may recalibrate and recoil at the beginning of next week... trade volumes will go up as people come back from Labor Day," said Jason Schenker, president of Prestige Economic.

But most of the attention will turn to President Obama, whose week will be focused on the economy as he travels to the hard-hit Midwest and gives a major White House press conference on Friday.

Oil falls

APP, Singapore

Oil prices fell below 75 dollars in Asian trade as investors took profit from gains made the previous day and braced for an expected weak set US employment numbers, analysts said.

New York's main contract, light sweet crude for October delivery, fell 43 cents to 74.59 dollars a barrel in the afternoon.

Brent North Sea crude for October delivery, shed 42 cents to 76.51 dollars.

Traders were taking profit from a hike in prices in New York ahead of the release of the monthly US jobs report later Friday, said Victor Shum, senior principal of Purvin and Gertz energy consultants in Singapore.

The 44-billion-dollar target for the new share offer represents a more than 40 percent increase in the company's capital, which on Thursday was estimated at 150 billion dollars.

Petrobras's share prices rose nearly five percent during trading in Sao Paulo after the announcement, confirming investor confidence in the issuance and Brazil's outlook generally.

Petrobras sells $64b of stock

APP, Rio De Janeiro

Brazil's Petrobras unveiled one of the world's biggest share offerings Friday, a sale of up to 64 billion dollars in new stock to finance oil exploration aimed at turning Brazil into a leading oil exporter of the 21st century.

The transaction could be expanded to 74 billion dollars if there was heavy demand, the state-run company said.

The cash serves as the core of an ambitious plan Petrobras has already outlined to boost capital expenditure over the next five years to 224 billion dollars as it seeks to tap potentially vast oil reserves discovered recently off the coast of Rio de Janeiro.
