

It is the voice of the youth that will set examples and a lot can be done if the society comes forward

Tourism in Bangladesh is very important and if we keep our beach environment clean, it will not be hard to attract tourists from all over the world." Jannat also shared her thoughts saying that volunteering work is necessary for a character build-up. "It is true that most of us have little knowledge about the environment and how it is being affected. We cannot talk about global warming and expect the locals to understand it, but what we can do is give them education practically or even in the written form such as leaflets which will help them to realise." She also says that the beach authority should be very strict about construction planning which is in a way harming the beauty of the beach.

Monica Chowdhury talked about organising programmes and events where the message regarding awareness should also be mentioned. "I do not like it when people smoke on the beach. Previously when the government declared prohibition on smoking publicly, it did create a major awareness. But now things are back to square one." She suggests that if the beach authority draws a certain boundary on the beach beyond which the smokers will be fined if they do smoke, there will be chances for positive results. "The voice of the youth will make a huge difference and I urge all to set examples to the world. I know we are still being judged with a narrow eye, but we can change their

The students in fact have a lot to say to the society through their volunteering activities.
