After every tour the members of the heritage club prepare a visual presentation and demonstrate it in the university cafeteria, which helps other students to understand the beauty and value of particular sites of historical importance. 'We publish an editorial on every semester in which students can share their views about our heritage and how to represent them to the international community" says Najmus Sakib a member and also the former president of the heritage club. The Heritage Club also longs for cultural exchanges with the international community. In this vision BUHC jointly with the Embassy of Thailand are planning to arrange a Pan Thai festival in which artifacts from both Thailand and Bangladesh will be displayed.

The agenda of the fair was divided in two parts firstly introducing different clubs to the new students so that clubs can sign up new members and later a cultural program organized by the BRAC University Cultural Club. Members of the cultural club performed dances, songs and different fun things at the program. A one-day film festival is also to be organized by the BRAC University Film Club on Sunday 3rd October 2010 in which famous films like In Burgges. The Expendables are to be shown.

One of the main objectives of the BRAC University club fair was to provide an opportunity for the students to choose their favorite ones from thirty-one different clubs. Students may have different choices about extra curricular activities so clubs at BRAC University are concerned with popular activities like drama or sports and also serious issues like enhancing entrepreneurship abilities or rural development. Talking with the star campus Professor Md. Golam Samdani Fakir the Pro-Vice Chancellor of the BRAC University expressed his satisfaction over the achievement of his students in extra curricular activities. 'We don't want that our students will be graduated from the University only with bookish knowledge. They should have practical experiences on different issues, which will help to develop their career and to understand their surroundings' said Professor Samdani. According to Professor Md. Golam Samdani Fakir attending extra curricular activities increases the confidence level of the students and it also grows leadership quality in them. Being busy in different club activities also keeps the students away from antisocial habits like addiction to drugs, gossiping and so on. The pro vice chancellor also said that they are very concerned that attending club activities should not hamper the education. Students should have a minimum CGPA to attend in club activities. For example to be a member of the BRAC University law club a student should have a CGPA of 3.5. The pro vice chancellor is also very proud about the awards and recognitions these clubs have brought for his University and Bangladesh. Recently the Moot Court Society of the BRAC University has achieved the honor of being one of the top ten memorials at the international level of Henry Dunant Moot Court Competition in Hong Kong.

Miftah a student from the BBA 11th semester was shadow practicing with drum sticks in a corner. 'I have to perform today in the cultural program. Music is my passion and my club provides me with great opportunities to practice music' said Miftah. During the club fair the senior students of the university get united with all their friends from different departments while the junior students get to know their seniors and facts about university life. The level of enthusiasm among students about the fair can be understood by the remark of Nora a student from EEE 2nd semester 'the club fair is like an Eid day for us we wait all through the year to celebrate this great day of fun and reunion'. The BRAC University club fair is really a place of union for its students where they get the chance to engage themselves in activities to follow their passion.
