

Young domestic workers should be provided with education

The number of children on the streets are increasing everyday, which is why, many more individuals and organisations need to come up and address the situation. Clearly, the authorities and the government alone will not be able to take care of such a huge dilemma. Moreover, one should not wait for the Universal Children's Day, to address this issue and spend some time thinking about it. A shout out to the youth out there to build a better and a stronger nation, act now.

More individuals and organisations should come up and address the situation