Thailand's PTEEP buys Statoil oil stake

REUTERS, Bangkok
Thailand's PTT Exploration and Production will pay $2.3 billion for 40 percent of Statoil ASA's Canadian oil sands project, joining the rush of Asian investors into the huge energy resource.

Canada's oil billions. The resource has been the target of oil sands of investments by Asian state oil companies in recent years as they seek to fuel their booming economies. We view them as a new player with a fresh set of ideas, Statoil Canada President Lars Christian Bacher said in an interview. "Technology development has always been part of Statoil's DNA and both companies are on the same page when it comes to driving technology development. The industry is searching for ways to lower-cost production techniques and to strengthen costs."
Norway's Statoil will remain majority owner and keep operating the early-stage Kai Kos Dehsh project in northern Alberta, which it acquired in 2007, according to terms of the deal announced by the company and production unit-state-controlled PTT Plc, is Thailand's first entry into
