"I hope that the university will hold such competitions every year to encourage the young people to speak out and express themselves." Jaami dreams of eventually setting up a pltform for inter-university talent search competitions in the near future.

The show had begun with a skit on sexual harassment of women on the streets, popularly known as 'eve-teasing'. The play sent out a very powerful message to the young people in the audience. The programme included a variety of performances, starting from singing and dancing to recitation, acting, jokes sessions and flute playing. Students even showcased skills in modern and folk music and dances along with some semi-classical compositions.

The audience included students belonging to the university. It was heart-warming to see them responding to their friends performing on stage.

The judges were stunned with the intense performances of the ten students. They had a very tough time on deciding the first, second and third positions. Eventually, the winner was, Md. Fazlal Rabbi Bhuiyan. With his amazing flute playing skills, not only did he blow the minds of the judges, he made the crowd just as enthusiastic about his performance. Second position was secured by Sanam Binte Siraji for her folk dance. The third prize was given to Jhumur Chakma who danced to an indigenous song. The most incredible part of her dance was how she balanced a glass bottle on her head during the performance. It was nothing less than an eye-catching performance and a treat for the audience as they went wild once again. All the other performances were really good as Umma and Mehdi did a small skit to show their acting abilities. Sultan cracked everyone up with his jokes. A recitation was done by Tanvir. Siddiky and Priyanka put on a very nice duet song, as did Kristy and Fazle. Last but not least was a very well choreographed dance by Zobaida. The winners were also presented with crests and certificates from the university. All these ten students were chosen from a list of sixty participants to show off their skills and talents and they did just that. All of them might not have won a position, but they all proved their worthiness of winning.

At the prize giving ceremony, the winning debate team showcased their star speaker Ashab, who won the best speaker award. The team members included Sifat E Manzur, Jahirul Islam. The runners-up team included Pias, Anowara and Marilyn. The topic of the debate was, "Money is the biggest motivator for people at work place." The winning team was presented with a crest from the university.

Professor Rozen, a person who had played a huge part in this whole event, was very delighted about the response she got from her students. She had hopes regarding all her students and promised them that this programme would be organised every year.
