Weddings are the biggest and most anticipated events come winter season.

something that is never seen the rest of the year. 15-year-old Anas is an active player who shares a court on one of the empty streets in Dhanmondi. He cannot wait till school is over so he can play for longer hours. Also, he wishes there were fewer aunties on the court. "Since all of us are waiting for our own slice of time, we get impatient when an aunty next door wants to join in and have a game with aunties from other flats. They take late swings and so the game drags on!" Mizan, an Advanced Level student considers playing badminton to be the best part about the winters in Dhaka. He plays on his rooftop court, which he painstakingly drew out as proper as the space would allow. However, he longs for more open spaces and proper courts where more players can play.

Clear your Closets!

Decembers in Dhaka is one of the most eventful months of the year. Victory Day is celebrated with joy and solemnity while preparations for Christmas and New Year's begin. Caught amidst the craze of it all, let us not forget our responsibilities as priviledged citizens. Starting from schools and universities to the many active non-profit organisations and youth volunteering groups, warm clothing drives will be carried out during the entire length of the winter season.
