Recognise hill people thru' constitution

CHT problems cannot be fixed without such recognition, seminar told

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Land disputes and other problems involving indigenous communities in the Chittagong Hill Tracts cannot be resolved unless those people are given constitutional recognition, Rashed Khan Menon, chairman of the parliamentary caucus on indigenous affairs, said yesterday.

"The issue of constitutional recognition of indigenous people is very important, as it involves their other problems," Menon told a discussion on amendment to the CHT Land Commission Act 2001 and solution to land disputes in the CHT at the Jatiya Press Club in the capital.

Kapaeeng Foundation, Chittagong Hill Tracts Citizens' Committee and Khagrachhari District Headmen Association organised the roundtable in association with ActionAid Bangladesh.

Menon, also member of the parliamentary special committee on constitutional amendment, said the committee has decided in principle to recommend giving constitutional recognition to indigenous people.

He said the government should go for moderated it.

amendment to the CHT Land Commission Act after discussing the matter with the regional council.

Menon, also president of the Workers' Party of Bangladesh, voiced concern over the activities of a few vested quarters that are trying to prolong the crises in the CHT.

Mangol Kumar Chakma, an adviser to the Kapaeeng Foundation, presented the keynote paper and said initiatives were taken to amend the CHT Land Commission Act after its enactment in 2001. But the Act is yet to be amended.

"We want two things: that the planes drop bombs on Gaddafi's tanks and heavy artillery; and that they (the coalition forces) give us weapons so we can fight," rebel fighter Yunes Abdelghaim told AFP.

The 27-year-old, who was holding a Russian AK-47 assault rifle and French flag, said it seemed as if the coalition had halted its air strikes for two days coinciding with a London conference on the Libyan crisis.

nuclear plant has reached a much higher level of radiation than previously reported.

The new readings near reactor No 1 - 300m from the shore - showed radioactive iodine at 3,355 times the legal limit, said Japan's nuclear safety agency.

Earlier samples had put the iodine level in the sea at 1,850 times the legal limit.

More than 11,000 people are known to have been killed by the devastating 11 March earthquake and tsunami.

Japan's Prime Minister Naoto Kan has said the country is on "maximum alert".

Japanese experts are considering whether to cover the reactor buildings at the Fukushima Daiichi plant with a special material, to stop the spread of radioactive substances, Chief Cabinet Secretary Yukio Edano says.

Yesterday, the government ordered nuclear power plant operators to start measures immediately.

The steps - to be completed by the end of April include preparing back-up power in case of loss of power supply, and having fire trucks with hoses ready at all times to intervene and ensure cooling systems for both reactors and pools of used fuel are maintained.

Workers at the Fukushima plant are trying to prevent radioactive water from seeping into the sea.

Highly radioactive liquid has been found inside and outside several reactor buildings.

Small amounts of plutonium have also been detected in soil at the plant the latest indication that one of the reactors suffered a partial meltdown.

Officials are considering a variety of tactics after efforts to cool the reactors with massive amounts of water led to dangerous sideeffects, as the run-off has flooded areas outside and may seep into the ocean and soil, reports AFP.

In the latest attempt to bring the disaster under control, workers will today begin to carpet two-thirds of the plant's 1.2 hectares (three acres) of grounds with resin, a nuclear safety agency official said yesterday. 'The aim is to block radioactive materials from running off into the ocean," he said. "It will be experimental so we're unsure of how much effect it will have." Masataka Shimizu, president of nuclear power plant operators Tepco, has been spreading into the air and ing from high blood pressure and dizziness. Hours later, Tepco Katsumata spoke to report-admitted to hospital, sufferers for the first time. He admitted that the company had not been able to cool the reactors, and pledged maximum efforts to stabilise them. And he added that reactors 1-4 would eventually have to be shut down for good.

Katsumata said his company was preparing to compensate those suffering damage caused by radiation leaks.

The chairman also apologised for the inconvenience caused by the rolling blackouts imposed to cope with power shortages.

Tepco has been accused of a lack of transparency and failing to provide information promptly.

It set the deadline of May 15 for the submission.

Hearing the time petition, the Court of Chittagong Metropolitan Sessions Judge AKM Shamsul Islam ordered the investigation officer to utilise the extended time better.

Metropolitan Public Prosecutor Kamal Uddin Ahammad, however, said this would be the last petition for time extension as the Criminal Investigation Department would hopefully complete its probe into the sensational case within the 60 days sought. The court granted the CID 46 days more to complete the investigation.

Terming the petition "politically motivated" and "intentional", defence lawyer Nurul Islam opposed granting of more time for the probe. IO Md Muniruzzaman Chowdhury, also a senior ASP of CID, moved the latest petition seeking 60 days on March 27, two days before the expiry of the previously extended time. With this, the court extended time to this IO for the 12th time. He started investigating the case on February 4, 2009. Quoting the judge, sources present in the court said, "According to CrPC, time could be extended many times but the question is whether the granted time is properly being used or not."

The public prosecutor said they submitted the time petition as it was needed to interrogate some people including former additional secretary of industries ministry Nurul Amin who was at the rest house of Chittagong Urea Fertiliser Ltd (CUFL) on the night of the arms haul.

The former additional secretary went to Cox's Bazaar from CUFL and it was not an official visit, the public prosecutor added.

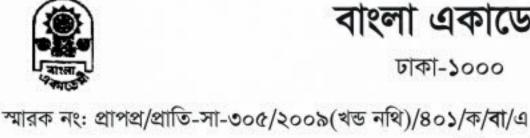

Earlier, IO Muniruzzaman said three Ansar members who were on duty at the CUFL jetty needed to be interrogated as well.

Sources at the Chittagong court said the IO mentioned interrogating former director general of the Directorate General of Forces Intelligence (DGFI) Maj Gen (retd) Sadek Hasan Rumi.

The same court during the last hearing on a time petition on February 22 reprimanded the IO for repeatedly asking for more time and for not having the case docket with him. After the IO submitted the case docket the following day, the court on February 24 granted CID 36 days which expired yester-

During the tenure of the last caretaker government, a Chittagong court on February 12, 2008, ordered further investigation into the case following an appeal made by the then public prosecutor Ahsanul Hoque Hena.

In January 2009, a Chittagong court ordered to change the IO following an appeal by the state lawyer. ASP Moniruzzaman of CID, Chittagong, was appointed as the fifth IO of the case.
