

India ready to transport rice in 15 days: Sharma

BSS, Dhaka

Indian Commerce Minister Anand Sharma yesterday said they are ready to export three lakh metric tons of coarse rice to Bangladesh in two weeks.

"It's now a matter of shipment as the legal battle in India regarding rice export to Bangladesh is over," Sharma told BSS after a meeting with Food Minister Dr Abdur Razzaque at Sonargaon Hotel.

Sharma, who also held talks with several other ministers in Dhaka, said the rice from India could reach even within seven days if Bangladesh wants. "We are very much sincere to fulfill our commitment," he added.

Dr Razzaque said the first shipment of rice import from India would take place 'anytime' as India finally cleared the 'intent' to export rice to Bangladesh. He said the government would also import rice from Vietnam and Thailand in order to ensure food security and price stability.

Food ministry sources said India committed in December last year to export five lakh metric tons of foodgrains, including three lakh metric tons of rice and 2 lakh metric tons of wheat, and signed an agreement in January this year. But none of the cereal was transported to Bangladesh, despite repeated reminding from importing nation.

Sharma said the export was stuck up in legal glitch as some of Indian private suppliers sued against Indian government's decision to exclude them from the export. The ordeal has, however, been over recently.

Official sources said Bangladesh wanted to import the rice much ahead of its major harvest, Boro, which begins shortly, and ensure enough supply of the staple, rice, in the market to offset the trend of price escalation. The rice from India is supposed to cost Tk 31.22 per kilogram and $446 per metric ton.

Bangladesh produces 3.55 crore metric tons of rice -- 1.9 crore metric tons of Boro, 1.35 crore metric tons of Aman and 0.35 crore metric tons of Aus -- and 10 lakh metric tons of wheat a year.

A policy dialogue styled "Tobacco: Is there a way out?" was held at the conference centre of The Daily Star in the city yesterday. The Management and Resources Development Initiative (MRDI), a non-profit organisation engaged in social development activities, and The Daily Star jointly organised the event with support from Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids. Corporal punishment causes hatred, fear among students

Psychologist tells view exchange meeting

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Corporal punishment on students in the name of discipline at schools causes different types of emotional outbursts like hatred, anger, fear, anxiety and depression in the long run, said a psychologist at a meeting yesterday.

"Excessive physical torture often lead to drug addiction. The torture sometimes turns so unbearable that children choose to commit suicide for relief," said Prof Dr Shamim F Karim of the Department of Psychology of Dhaka University.

Corporal punishment and mental torture cause students to lose self-esteem and become reluctant to attend school, one of the factors leading to drop outs, he said.

Representatives from Unicef,

Unesco, PID of Mymensingh, madrasa board and relevant organisations participated in the view exchange meeting to finalise the draft on Training Manual for Teachers to Stop Physical and Mental Torture on Students of Primary and Secondary.

Directorate of Secondary and Higher Education (DSHE) and Ministry of Education jointly organised the meeting at Teachers Training Institute in the city. Prof Taslima Begum, director (training) of DSHE, briefly read out the manual.

Emphasising on activity-based training, speakers said such training would help teachers understand and remember techniques to handle students.

Secretary of Primary and Mass Education Ministry AKM Abdul Awal Majumdar said guardians pressurise students for outstanding result, which is also a kind of torture and should be addressed.

Mentioning an incident with his relative, teacher of a government school, who was asked to pay bribe for a transfer appeal, he said, "How could we expect teachers not to torture students when they themselves have to face such ordeals."

"We should change our perspectives to stop corporal punishments in schools. You cannot discipline mischievous students by punishing them," said Education Minister Nurul Islam Nahid.

Personal Secretary to prime minister Nazrul Islam Khan and writer Selina Hossain spoke at the programme with DSHE Director General Prof Noman ur Rashid in the chair.
