Final against Djokovic

Tennis

AFP, Madrid

Rafael Nadal overcame Roger Federer 5-7, 6-1, 6-3 to set up a Madrid Masters final against Novak Djokovic on an emotional day that had started with a tearful tribute to Seve Ballesteros.

World number one Nadal stood side-by-side with old rival Federer in a minute's silence at the Caja Magica before a showreel of Ballesteros's greatest moments played out on the giant courtside screens.

"It's a terrible day for Spain and the world. We lost a great champion, probably the greatest in the history of Spain," said Nadal of the 54-year-old golfing legend, who lost his brave fight against cancer.

"Seve was one of the pioneers in so many things... especially in golf. He was an example to everyone."

Despite the sombre occasion, Nadal, with a black ribbon pinned to his shirt as a mark of respect for his compatriot, went on to thrill his fans and reach his third Madrid final in three years.

His victory set up a familiar final for the world number one, with Nadal to face off for the third straight time at a Masters this season against world number two Djokovic.

The Serb overcame an early lapse to hold off unseeded Brazilian Thomaz Bellucci 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

One way or another, a streak will be broken in Sunday's final with Nadal not having lost on clay in 37 matches and Djokovic undefeated on all surfaces in 2011 after 31 straight wins.

"I try not to think about losing. I try to think about winning and I think that's a positive state of mind. That's why I'm playing well," said Djokovic, who defeated Nadal in the Masters finals in Indian Wells and Miami earlier this year.

Nadal will be bidding for his third clay title of the spring after Monte Carlo and Barcelona.

He has now beaten Federer in 11 of 13 meetings on clay and stands 16-8 overall in their epic series.

It was the third straight year the all-star pair had played in Madrid, with Federer winning the 2009 trophy and Nadal doing the same 12 months ago.

"I'm glad to have won, but it was not our best match. It was an emotional day for me and Spain," added Nadal.

Federer now heads to the Rome Masters with a 26-7 record for the season and one title from Doha, having played his last final in Dubai in February.

"It was a good match, I had lots of chances. Everyone knows Rafa plays extraordinary on clay," said Federer. "I played aggressive and had lots of winners but lots of errors, that's how it goes."

"But I'm happy with my performance. I want to look ahead to Rome and Roland Garros. I'm sorry I lost but pleased to have played another semi against Rafa."

"It was very close. Maybe the result does not show it as such but I was right there until the end."

The Swiss world number three started the match poorly, losing his first service game, which was marred by a double-fault and an over-hit forehand.

The 16-time Grand Slam champion also failed to convert any of three break points in a lengthy fourth game, with Nadal eventually stretching his leading margin to 4-2 with a love game.

But the Swiss worked his magic to get back to level-pegging, 4-4, and held in dramatic fashion after saving three break points in the 11th game for 6-5.

A sizzling Federer passing shot to the far reaches gave him a set point, which he finished cleanly with a down-the-line winner, breaking Nadal for the second time and taking the early lead after 64 minutes.

But the Swiss suffered a reversal in the first game of the second set, with Nadal breaking via a controversial ball deemed good by chair umpire Mohamed Layhani to the dismay of Federer, who argued the point before getting back to work.

Federer seethed quietly throughout the set as Nadal squared the match.

In the decider, Federer went down a break 1-3 on a forehand called out by centimetres, then dropped serve in the next game.

It set the tone for the remainder, with Nadal scraping home on his first match point as Federer netted a backhand.

Australia held by India

AFP, Ipoh

World champions Australia were held to a 1-1 draw by India at the Sultan Azlan Shah Cup on Sunday thanks to a superb defensive performance against a second-half onslaught from the world's leading team.

Both teams now have four points after a win and a draw, but the Indians have played a game more, losing to South Korea.

Just six months ago India were thrashed 0-8 by Australia in the Commonwealth Games final in New Delhi and Australian coach Ric Charlesworth said the result was disappointing.

"But I am not surprised... India played good hockey but I think we too were responsible as we did not take our chances," he said.

It was a resilient performance by India who had to absorb tremendous pressure in the second-half as the Australians pushed for victory after being pegged back from a 14th minute lead.

Australia created early opportunities with Glenn Turner and Jacob Whetton having good shots at goal saved by India's Adrian D'Souza.

The Aussies took the lead through Whetton, who scored with a field goal after dribbling into the D.

India had several chances but the best opportunity came in the 19th minute when Shivender Singh missed the final touch.

Axe irks Colly

Cricket

AFP, London

Paul Collingwood has revealed his despair after being axed as captain of England's Twenty20 team just a year after leading his country to their first ever success in a global tournament.

Collingwood feared the worst when he was called to a meeting with national selector Geoff Miller at short notice on Wednesday, but it still came as a massive shock to hear official confirmation that he would be replaced by Stuart Broad.

The Durham all-rounder, who captained England when they beat Australia in the final of the 2010 World Twenty20 competition, had retired from Test cricket to concentrate on staying fit and motivated for the Twenty20 role.

But now he has suffered a hammer blow which could cause him to consider walking away from international cricket.

"I was full of optimism about trying to regain my form and my place in the one-day side," Collingwood told the Mail on Sunday.

"As for the longer term, after retiring from Test cricket in the winter I had my sights set firmly on leading our defence of the World Twenty20 Cup in 2012.

Yuvi looks to Sourav

PTI, Chandigarh

His side languishing at the bottom of the points table, Pune Warriors captain Yuvraj Singh on Saturday said that they were now looking forward to former India captain Sourav Ganguly to restore some pride in their Indian Premier League (IPL) campaign.

"Hopefully, he will get us a win. It's good to have him back. I just feel someone who has been captain of Indian team for a long time can always help the youngsters. Hopefully, he will hit few sixes with the bat," Yuvraj said ahead of Pune Warriors' match against his former team Kings XI Punjab at Mohali.

With the likes of Rahul Dravid and VVS Laxman featuring in the IPL, Yuvraj said there was no reason why Ganguly should not be part of the lucrative Twenty20 league.

Asked how he sees Ganguly playing under him in a sort of role reversal, Yuvraj said, "It feels great that Sourav is playing under me. He has always helped me as a captain (of the Indian team) and now it's my duty to help him."

Yuvraj said his side would play their best to break the string of successive defeats.

"Hope to get a win as soon as possible. It's a must win situation from here on. We have tried various combinations but unfortunately they haven't clicked. But, now with Sourav Ganguly on our side we are hoping to get back to winning ways," said Yuvraj after team practice session at Sector 16 cricket stadium.

"We won first two matches with same combination but it does not work always. Somebody has to score down the order also. Moreover, we have specialist openers and Jesse Ryder has been doing well," he reasoned.

Yuvraj said he is "hoping to turn the tide" at his home ground against the team which he once led.

All eyes on Sunday would be on Ganguly, who replaced injured Ashish Nehra in the side. It will have to be seen whether the experienced left-hander, who might play on Sunday, is able to boost the sagging morale of the team.

Pune had a rollicking start to their campaign and Yuvraj led the new franchise to an emphatic win against his erstwhile team Kings XI Punjab, but the seven losses on the trot after two wins have been demoralising.

After being cold-shouldered by Kolkata Knight Riders, the 38-year-old Ganguly has a point to prove and going by the number of hours he put in at the nets, he could be expected to play on Sunday.

On Saturday also, he battled for a long session, but did not oblige the media persons who waited for hours to have him speak a few words.

Azarenka sets up final with Kvitova

AFP, Madrid

Fourth seed Victoria Azarenka moved to within one victory of a third title from her last four WTA events when she ended the hopes of Germany's Julia Goerges 6-4, 6-2 in the semifinals of the ATP-WTA Madrid Masters on Saturday.

Belarusian Azarenka, who won back to back trophies in Miami and Marbella last month, will play Czech 16th seed Petra Kvitova, who dispatched Australian Open finalist Li Na, the Chinese sixth seed, 6-3, 6-1 in 61 minutes.

The first five games went against serve, with Kvitova finally steadying to take charge in a bid for her fourth career title.
