

C'Ron eyes record

AFP, Madrid

Real Madrid star Cristiano Ronaldo is looking for personal glory on Saturday when the Portuguese star aims to beat the all-time La Liga goals record of 38 on the final day of the season.

Ronaldo equalled the record, set by Athletic Bilbao's Telmo Zarra in 1951 and matched by Real Madrid's Mexican icon Hugo Sanchez in 1990, last weekend and can post a new landmark when Real host already-relegated Almeria at the Santiago Bernabeu.

On a personal level Ronaldo has been a huge success but the silverware has not been as forthcoming with the Kings Cup win not enough to satisfy the former Manchester United man in a season where Barcelona wrapped up the title.

"It could be my best season in terms of goals but as a team we wanted to win the Champions League and league titles," said Ronaldo.

Barcelona are still basking in their third successive league title and their final game of the season at Malaga on Saturday will be another chance to blood youngsters with the Champions League final on the horizon.

Coach Pep Guardiola rested his weary superstars last time out and is set to do the same as his team go for the double in the Champions League final against Manchester United at Wembley on May 28.

French full back Eric Abidal is one player stepping up his fitness in a desperate attempt to make the showpiece having overcome surgery on a liver tumour.

"If I don't play in the final then it is not a problem," said Abidal. "I am lucky because the fitness team know me well and will get me in top form for this day."

In-form Malaga have taken 16 points from the last 18 but have nothing to play for.

At the bottom of the table, the relegation battle will go down to a nail-biting final Saturday as six teams aim to beat the drop.

Almeria and Hercules are already relegated but one spot remains.

Real Zaragoza are currently third from bottom but are just one point from safety going into the final match at Levante.

Getafe hover one point above the drop zone and must improve their wretched away record against a Real Sociedad team that are also not yet safe. Getafe have not won on the road in the league in five months.

Sociedad are two points above the relegation places and need a point to stay up.

Deportivo La Coruna are one point above the bottom three and host a Valencia side that have already secured third place.

Osasuna and Real Mallorca, both two points above the relegation zone, are the other two sides involved in the dogfight and will hope to make home advantage count.

Osasuna entertain a Villarreal side that have wrapped up fourth place, while Mallorca host a Atletico Madrid team that need a victory to try and secure a top six finish.

The race for the Europa League is also set to go down to the wire with three sides jostling for two places.

Sevilla, Athletic Bilbao and Atletico Madrid are all locked on 55 points heading into their final games of the season.

As it stands, Atletico would be the one team to miss out due to their inferior head to head record and the current Europa League holders will hope their rivals slip up and they can win at Mallorca.

It will be manager Quique Sanchez Flores' last game in charge of Atletico after he declared his intention to leave at the end of the season and finishing in Europe is crucial for the club to have any chance of holding on to star Argentine striker Sergio "Kun" Aguero.

Sixth-placed Bilbao are in a similar situation with their Spanish striker Fernando Llorente but know victory at Racing Santander will guarantee them European football.

Sevilla, fourth last season, know a win at Espanyol would secure fifth place as they have a better head to head record over Bilbao and Atletico.

Gladbach edge out Bochum

AFP, Berlin

Belgium striker Igor de Camargo gave Borussia Moenchengladbach a 1-0 win at home to second-division VfL Bochum in Thursday's German league, first-leg play-off to put his side a step closer to safety.

Bundesliga side Gladbach will take a slender advantage back to Bochum on Wednesday in the second-leg after de Camargo tapped home with the last kick of the game following a goal-mouth scramble in the 93rd minute.

Although the fourth official had indicated there was two minutes of added time, there was controversy as two minutes 40 seconds of extra time was shown on the clock when Gladbach took the final throw-in that led to the goal.

Referee Guenter Perl blew for the time immediately after the goal as the Gladbach players celebrated wildly, while Bochum were left fuming.

Having finished third from bottom of the Bundesliga last season, Gladbach must beat Bochum, who finished third from top of the second division, to guarantee their place in the top tier next season.

In the play-off, the away-goals rule used in European competition applies.

Fight for survival

AFP, London

Five teams will be fighting for survival on Sunday as the English Premier League reaches its climax with what is poised to be one of the most fraught relegation battles in years.

With Manchester United wrapping up a record 19th title last week, the final day of the 2010/2011 season will be dominated by events at the foot of the table, where only one point separates five teams.

West Ham were the first side to be relegated after they slumped to a dramatic defeat at Wigan on Sunday.

The Hammers' exit has left Blackburn, Wolves, Birmingham, Blackpool and Wigan facing a nerve-jangling finale.

For Wolves and Blackburn, who face each other at Molineux, the equation is simple: victory will guarantee their Premier League status for another season.

The two clubs sit just above the relegation zone with 40 points, followed by Birmingham, Blackpool and Wigan, who all have 39 points.

Wolves had looked doomed for much of the year but have climbed out of the drop zone after a draw with Birmingham that was followed by back-to-back wins over West Bromwich Albion and Sunderland.

Wolves manager Mick McCarthy said he had told his players to ignore the possible permutations and stay focused on Blackburn.

"Everyone's been in our ear holes -- the media, mums, dads, kids, friends, saying what if this happens or this happens," McCarthy said.

"But I just told them that if we won our games there was nothing anybody else could do about it. We've done that and have got to go and do it again against Blackburn."

Blackburn boss Steve Kean's preparations could scarcely have been worse.

The Rovers manager was charged with drunken driving following his team's 1-1 draw with Manchester United last week, and was subsequently summoned to India for an unscheduled meeting with the club's owners.

British press reports meanwhile have suggested that Kean, who took over as manager following the controversial dismissal of Sam Allardyce in December, may be sacked even if Rovers manage to stay up.

The fate of Birmingham, Blackpool and Wigan may hinge on results elsewhere.

Blackpool face the toughest task, travelling to Old Trafford to face Manchester United knowing they will need to get a result to have any chance of staying up.

Although the build-up has been dominated by talk of United fielding a weakened team ahead of next week's Champions League final against Barcelona, Seaside's manager Ian Holloway has backed his team to defy the odds.

"We've got to go to Manchester United and probably get a win, and that might not even be enough," Holloway said.

"I believe it will be, though, because Wolves are at home to Blackburn. I've had some strange things happen in my life and maybe the main man up there has written a story that would probably beat Cinderella."

"And I believe we can do it, whoever United put out. I want to spoil their party."

Birmingham manager Alex McLeish has called on his team to be fearless when they travel to White Hart Lane for a daunting tie with Tottenham, who are chasing fifth place and a Europa League berth.

"During the period of the Copa America, Kaka will still need to do some activities related to his recovery so we concluded in a recent chat with him that it was still not the time for a call-up," Menezes told a news conference.

Kaka has made a disappointing comeback from knee surgery for Real Madrid this year and not managed to reclaim a first team place.

Menezes said the only player not in the squad to defend the title that he would wait for until the last minute was Santos playmaker Paulo Henrique Ganso who has a thigh injury.

"We're following the player's recovery so we can decide at the right moment. He is the only player not among these 28 who can be called for the Copa America," Menezes said.

Fergie doesn't like Twitter

Football

AFP, Manchester

Sir Alex Ferguson has joined the debate about footballers' use of the social networking Twitter site by branding it "a waste of time".

The veteran Manchester United manager was speaking at the end of a week in which his club's high-profile forward Wayne Rooney attracted unwanted headlines for an on-line dispute with one follower.

Rooney was also embroiled in a spat with the broadcaster Piers Morgan, an ardent Arsenal supporter.

Earlier this season, United midfielder Darren Gibson opened a Twitter account only to close it within minutes after he received a large amount of abuse from his own club's supporters.

After Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger warned his players of the potential "negative repercussions" involved with the use of Twitter this week, Ferguson is also conscious of the problems involved with such exposure.

"It's about responsibility," said Ferguson, 69. "I think they (players) are responsible for their actions, what they say on Twitter."

"I don't understand it, to be honest with you. I don't have the time to do it. There are a million things you can do with your life other than that. Go to a library and read a book. I'm serious. What a waste of time."

"But they seem to have a certain momentum at the moment. Everyone seems to want to do it."

"I don't understand it but it is something that we, as a club, are looking at because there can be issues attached to it and we don't want that."

Rooney, who had earlier vowed to "put to sleep" a fan who abused him on Twitter, later engaged in a spat with CNN chat show host Morgan.

Morgan, an avowed Arsenal fan, poked fun at Rooney following the player's attendance at Manchester United's awards night this week.

"What award did you win ... Fastest Transfer U-Turn of the Year After Big Cheque Arrived?", Morgan wrote, referring to Rooney's demand for a transfer earlier this season.

Rooney responded: "@piersmorgan did u win 1 for most boring show of the year. Stop hanging on to me pls. I don't want to know u."

Wenger had claimed that Twitter could be a positive phenomenon for high-profile players as it allows them to keep in touch with true fans -- an argument with which Ferguson does not agree.

"It's better if you just play well on the pitch," he said.

Meanwhile, Ferguson revealed he is still hopeful that Paul Scholes will continue his career beyond next weekend's Champions League Final against Barcelona.

Scholes, 36, is out of contract this summer and there is a strong school of thought that he will retire, meaning this weekend's game against Blackpool may prove to have been his last at Old Trafford.

"I don't think so," said Ferguson of that prospect. "We will discuss it and, hopefully, encourage him to stay on another year. We will talk at the end of the year."

Pirlo going to Juve

AFP, Rome

Italian midfield playmaker Andrea Pirlo, out of contract after 10 years with champions AC Milan, should be playing at Juventus next season, his agent said on Friday.

"He still has some details to sort out, but I think that Andrea Pirlo is heading for Juventus," said Tullio Tinti, saying that a three-year contract was being discussed without giving details of the salary.

"He'll make a decision in the next few days, but Juve is really the leading candidate," added Tinti.

Bastian out for Germany

AFP, Berlin

Germany star Bastian Schweinsteiger will play no part in a friendly against Uruguay on May 29 or in two Euro 2012 qualifiers next month because of injury, the German football federation (DFB) said Friday.

Schweinsteiger, who is vice captain and who has 87 caps for Germany, "needs to have a lengthy break," the DFB said in a statement.

Germany have back-to-back Euro 2012 qualifiers against Austria on June 3 in Vienna and against Azerbaijan on June 7 in Baku.

Riquelme's Copa wish

Football

SOCCERNET

Boca Juniors star Juan Roman Riquelme is hoping to end his three-year international exile and receive a call-up to Sergio Batista's Argentina squad for this summer's Copa America.

Riquelme, 32, has not played for the Albiceleste since falling out with Diego Maradona in 2008 but after scoring four goals in his past seven games for Boca, the former Villarreal playmaker believes he has done enough to earn an international recall.

"There's five matches left in the championship (Clausura) and I want to do well to see if I can be in the Copa America," Riquelme told ESPN+.

A player whose inclusion in the squad is in doubt is Carlos Tevez after Batista revealed the Manchester City captain is unlikely to feature in his starting line-up at the tournament in July, which is being hosted by Argentina.

"I know Carlos is a great player - he's played in two World Cups, he is experienced - but right now my No. 9 is Messi," Batista said. "Messi is going to play in that position and I have Gonzalo Higuain to give me options."

Batista's recent revelation that Manchester City captain Carlos Tevez is unlikely to feature in his starting XI at the tournament, which Argentina is hosting.

Riquelme expressed his surprise at Batista's comments, but admitted that with such a talented group of players there is always likely to be someone left disappointed.

"I believe that Carlos has had a very good year and he can give a lot to the team," Riquelme said. "[Though] It's understood that being the national team manager is complicated."

"There's always one left out. The World Cup is a clear example. Lisandro Lopez was named the best player in France and no one said anything. We are fortunate to have many good players and there's always one left out."
