Power for 12 lakh new subscribers

PDB resumes giving connections after 2 years; new lines within this year

MD FAZLUR RAHMAN

Nearly 12 lakh residential buildings and industrial units will get power connections this year, as the government has resumed providing electricity connections after a pause of more than two years, said Bangladesh Power Development Board (BPDB) officials.

"We have started providing connections to new buildings and factories, thanks to the improvement in power situation," said a BPDB official, wishing anonymity.

The BPDB will provide new electricity connections in phases. About four lakh applicants, who have already subscribed for power connections, will be brought under the national electricity network in the first phase. The rest will get the facility gradually, said the official.

The users, however, must get solar energy systems installed to enjoy the facility. Residential buildings using up to 2 kilowatt of electricity a day will have to meet five percent of their power consumption from renewable energy sources. It is seven percent for commercial buildings and factories consuming 50 kilowatt of electricity and 10 percent for users of power above 50 kilowatt.

Garment factories must have solar solutions installed to meet five percent of their power consumption, said the official.

The government stopped giving new connections to households and

EC wants firm grip on poll officials

Seeks power to punish govt officials for misconduct, failure to perform

SHAKHAWAT LITON

The Election Commission wants the power to punish civil servants engaged in poll duties for misconduct and incompetence.

The EC has drafted proposals for changes to the Representation of the People Order to get this authority, sources said.

It believes if the changes are brought to the electoral laws, it will empower the EC to effectively control the electoral officials during parliamentary elections.

The EC, a constitutional body, appoints and engages a large number of government officials in election duties. They are considered officials working on deputation under the EC.

Their efficiency and neutrality in poll duties largely determine the fate of a free and fair election and also the image of the EC. But the existing laws do not allow the EC to take punitive actions against civil

G8 leaders for united stance on Arab revolts

AFP, Deauville

G8 leaders sought yesterday to thrash out a common position on how to support Arab democratic revolts, brandishing a threat of action against Syria and demanding Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi go.

The demands were laid out in a draft declaration by leaders of the world's most industrialised democracies seen by AFP, which could yet be watered down, especially given Russia's strong Middle Eastern alliances.

The strongest language was reserved for Gaddafi, with even Russia apparently backing a demand for the strongman to quit, even though Moscow claimed it had been asked to promote a negotiated settlement to the Libya conflict.

"We demand the immediate cessation of the use of force against civilians by the Libyan regime forces as well as the cessation of all incitement to hostility and violence against the civilian population," it said.

"Gaddafi and the Libyan government have failed to fulfil their responsibility to protect the Libyan population and have lost all legitimacy. He has no future in a free, democratic Libya. He must go," it warned.

BNP moves to stem infighting

Sends strict guidelines to district, front leaders

RAKIB HASNET SUMAN

The main opposition BNP recently issued some strict guidelines for its leaders across the country to avoid internal clashes.

Party insiders said letters mentioning the 4-point guidelines are being sent to presidents and general secretaries of all districts and front and associate bodies of the party to ensure organisational discipline.

The same letter will be sent to all the members of party's national executive committee, they added.

Some party high-ups, however, expressed concern over the move saying it will have a negative impact on the people about the organisation and its leadership.

The letter signed by Joint Secretary General Ruhul Kabir Rizvi asked party men to uphold party discipline by any means.

It instructed the party members to chant slogans only in the names of late president Ziaur Rahman, Chairperson Khaleda Zia and Senior Vice-chairman Tarique Rahman during party programmes.

"Slogans must be political and person-centric slogans will not be allowed," noted the letter adding involvement of junior leaders in any political argument of seniors will
