Problems plentiful

INAM AHMED

It has been an unnerving year, not only for the finance minister but for us all. Because anyone with some sense can find himself looking eye to eye with a Hydra head of thorny issues. Probably never had the economy faced so many problems at one time, each promising to grow bigger and squish its prey.

The ever growing lines in front of trucks at street corners selling cheap rice show the biggest of the problems the economy is faced with -- ever rising inflation. Suddenly people across the board -- those who queue at the open rice sales points, and those who cannot because of their status symbol -- are feeling the pinch. Everybody is trying to charge higher -- fares are going up, non-food items are getting pricey -- to cope with the situation. Only those with fixed income find themselves in a cauldron of helplessness. It can also be the perfect situation when the society will tend to easily jump into corruption's brace.

Reasons why inflation is going up are known to all -- global price shock, taka losing ground against the backdrop of weakening foreign exchange reserves, and high expansion of credit being the most prominent ones. We cannot do much when food and other commodities get costly on the international market. And when taka dips, imports get even costlier, fuelling imported inflation. And the simple rule is that when supply increases with credit growth, demand grows too, and so does inflation.

Now we can do little if not nothing about the global situation. But we could have tried more to improve our foreign reserves. We could have tried to improve our foreign aid utilisation. We did not. We could have worked harder to tap more jobs abroad for

No unrest if we sit, talk

PM tells JS about BNP's agitation over caretaker system

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina yesterday said the present sizzling political situation can be resolved through discussion.

She hinted main opposition BNP is "creating political instability" over the caretaker government issue.

"No political unrest will be created if we ourselves [Hasina and Khaleda Zia] sit and discuss," Hasina, also the leader of the House, said in parliament replying to a lawmaker's query.

She said they are not creating complexities in politics, adding, they want to hand over people's power to the people by strengthening parliament through constitutional amendment. "What we can do if somebody does not like it?"

"They [BNP] can enforce hartal only. But it will only harm the country and the people, but nothing will happen."

"I don't know with what hope and by whose signal they want to create political unrest. If they have anything to say, the can come to parliament and place their proposals," she said replying to a query raised by independent lawmaker Fazlul Azim.

"They can still join parliament. But they don't," Hasina added.

HC asks govt to demolish structures of those in 30 days

ASHUTOSH SARKAR

The High Court yesterday directed the government to remove or demolish 77 unauthorised housing projects in and around Dhaka within 30 days.

The court declared the housing projects illegal and Rajuk itself had provided the petitioners with the list of 77 illegal housing projects.
