Asian stocks fell Friday on growing concern that US lawmakers will not break a deadlock on a deal to avert a default by the world's richest country.

Ford, UAW open contract talks amid uncertainty

AFP, Dearborn, Michigan
Officials from Ford and the United Auto Workers opened a new round of contract negotiations Friday, saying they are committed to resolving their differences without a strike.
"It's like welcoming old friends back," Ford chairman William Clay Ford said at the opening ceremony of the talks.
"I'd like to thank you for what you've done to help us weather an economic downturn that was like nothing I've ever seen before," he added.
Detroit's three big automakers, including General Motors and Chrysler, are all in contract talks with the United Auto Workers amid an uncertain economy and limited prospects for gains for the union's 100,000 workers.

General Motors and Chrysler received federal help in 2009 that bailed the companies out of bankruptcy. The bailout terms include a provision banning workers at those companies from striking.
Ford, however, did not receive federal bailout funds so the unionized workers have the right to go on strike.
"We're excited to be here," said UAW president Bob King. "Ford turned around because of efforts of our members and we want to negotiate a contract that rewards them."
King also dismissed talk of a possible strike at Ford.

"I don't think about a strike. It doesn't enter my thought processes," said King, waving aside speculation the negotiations would be difficult because of the company's healthy profits and lush executive compensation packages.
"I know we have some differences. We always do," added Jimmy Settles, the UAW vice president in charge of the negotiations. But "we have learned the art of negotiation," he said, adding the last strike at Ford was 35 years ago.
Ford chief executive Alan Mulally said the negotiations will set the stage for the next step in Ford's growth, noting the company was prepared to add some 7,000 new employees over the next two years.

GM invests in solar energy systems maker

REUTERS, Rochester Hills, Michigan
A General Motors Co unit has invested $7.5 million and taken an undisclosed stake in Sunlogics Inc, helping the solar energy systems manufacturer to establish plants in Michigan and Canada and create 310 jobs at the small company.
GM Ventures said it also signed commercial agreements with Sunlogics for the installation of solar charging stations at Chevrolet dealerships and GM plants, as well as a power purchase deal to install large solar arrays at GM factories and buy the energy produced by the arrays.
"Most forecasts predict that global solar use will double over the next several years, much of that growth in North America and Asia," Jon Lauckner, president of GM Ventures, said at Sunlogics new headquarters here on Thursday.

"Solar is a smart business decision because renewable energy brings cost efficiencies over time and is good for the environment," he added, saying it complements the company's electrification strategy that started with the roll-out of the Chevrolet Volt plug-in electric hybrid car.
In conjunction with the Sunlogics deal, GM said it has committed to doubling the use of solar power use at its plants globally to 60 megawatts -- the equivalent of powering 10,000 homes annually -- by the end of 2015. The U.S. automaker derives 1.4 percent of its U.S. energy consumption from renewable resources.
GM has gained attention with the Volt. The U.S. automaker's push into electric vehicles is partly aimed at seizing the green mantle Toyota Motor Corp earned with the roll-out of its popular Prius hybrid vehicle.

Sunlogics and GM previously collaborated to develop a solar photovoltaic canopy and charging station for Volt dealers and there are two in place at stores in Grand Blanc, Michigan, and Modesto, California.
The technology designed by Sunlogics is called the Chevrolet Volt "Green Zone," which gives Chevy dealers the ability to solar charge the electric car under the canopy. Just one provides enough energy to power two to three homes per year, or more than a quarter of a dealer's energy consumption, GM said.
GM hopes to have 250 Chevy dealers signed up for the program by the middle of next year, said Rob Threkeld, global manager of renewable energy at GM.

Vodafone pays out $3.3b from Verizon windfall

REUTERS, London
Vodafone shareholders will get $3.3 billion (2 billion pounds) from a long-awaited Verizon Wireless dividend, raising hopes for regular payouts from the U.S. company after a six-year drought.
Shares in Vodafone, the world's biggest mobile phone operator by revenue, rose as much as 5.7 percent Friday after Verizon Wireless said it would pay $10 billion to the British company and co-owner Verizon Communications.
"Verizon's attempt to squeeze Vodafone has resoundingly failed, they now have no choice but to pay the cash," analyst Robin Bienenstock at brokerage Bernstein said, predicting regular dividends.
Vodafone has not received a payout from Verizon Wireless, in which it holds 45 percent, since 2005, partly because Verizon had hoped to force Vodafone out of the joint venture by not paying a dividend, say analysts.

The development is the latest victory in a campaign by Chief Executive Vittorio Colao's campaign to make Vodafone's sprawling portfolio more effective.
In the last year, Vodafone has resolved several shared-ownership issues, including buying Essar out of an Indian joint venture for $5.46 billion and selling a stake in China Mobile for $6.5 billion.
Newbury, England-based Vodafone said its shareholders would receive 2 billion pounds ($3.3 billion) from its $4.5 billion share of the windfall via a special 4 pence-a-share dividend to be paid in February, with the balance used to pay down debt.

Shares in Vodafone were up 4.5 percent, or 7.2 pence, at 172.6 pence by 11:33 a.m., having earlier risen as high as 174.9 pence to levels not seen since May. It was the biggest gainer on the blue-chip FTSE 100 index.
"We believe this will mark the resumption of regular dividend flows from VZW (Verizon Wireless)," Investec analysts wrote in a note to clients, adding it may also prove a turning point in Vodafone's relationship with its U.S. partner.
"Verizon Wireless is the cash cow for Verizon (Communications) and in order that Verizon can sustain its dividends to shareholders, we believe the cash must continue to flow from VZW," they wrote, reiterating a "buy" recommendation on Vodafone shares.
Vodafone had flagged in May that it expected to receive a dividend from Verizon next year.
