Hoping high on wheelchair

DAVID WEIR

In just under a year from now the 2012 Paralympics will begin in London. And I'm confident that the UK will put on the most amazing show.

London 2012 will be my fourth Paralympics but the most special by far as someone born and raised in South London. I'm convinced it will be the best Paralympics ever.

I caught the racing bug when I was really young competing in wheelchair races from the age of 8. I started off representing my school, then my area of London and then I raced in the London minimarathon. I made my international debut at 14. I didn't compete in the Sydney Paralympics; I think I'd started racing too young and as a result I lost my focus for a while. But when I watched Tanni Grey-Thompson win several gold medals on the television at home I got really emotional -- it made me realise that racing was what I wanted to do and I started training again.

The Paralympic Games returns to its spiritual home in 2012, as the UK was the birthplace of the Paralympic movement. In 1948 Doctor Ludwig Guttman organised a sports competition for a group of wounded British war veterans at Stoke Mandeville hospital, 4 years later Dutch athletes took part making it an international event. By the 1960 Games 400 athletes from 21 countries took part and the competition was officially recognised as the Paralympic Games.

We're using the 2012 Paralympic Games as an opportunity to encourage more disabled people to take part in sport. I am playing my part in this and since Beijing I have been mentoring a number of young racers hoping some will break through and become future Paralympians. The commitment required is immense and involves an often gruelling training schedule. You have to be mentally tough, but it's all worth it.

2012 presents a huge opportunity for disability sport and the Paralympic movement. The television coverage alone will help project the sport around the world and really help raise its profile. I hope people will see how exciting Paralympic sport is and that we work and train as hard as able-bodied athletes. We really have to make the most of the opportunity 2012 presents, the build up, Games time itself and then the 'afterglow'. We have to continue promoting disability sport after the Games have finished and highlight what it can do to enrich the lives of disabled people and its role in helping to build a more inclusive society. I'd encourage anyone thinking about disability sport to just take the plunge and give it a try.

The 2012 Games will be a great platform to demonstrate what the UK has achieved for disabled people on and off the track. I've seen the positive changes in society since I started racing. There are many more disabled children in mainstream schools now, there's more of a positive attitude to disabled people in society in general for example people don't stare in the street as perhaps they would have done a generation ago. Thanks to legislation and improved access and facilities disabled people in the UK are able to live independent lives. Most workplaces now have disabled members of staff. I hope the UK example will inspire other countries to improve the lives of their disabled citizens.

The Olympic Park is a fantastic sporting site. Anyone who has visited it cannot fail to be impressed. It has been designed very much with the athletes and accessibility in mind. All the venues are so close together and the site is so green. The venues really will inspire athletes to deliver their personal best. Disability access has been incorporated into the design and structure of the buildings, open spaces and transport for 2012 ensuring as many people as possible can enjoy the spectacle of the Games.

I can't describe what competing in 2012 in front of a home crowd will mean. I raced with a Chinese athlete in Beijing and the volume in the stadium with his home fans chanting was overwhelming. Winning gold in London would be the best moment of my life professionally.

The UK will take the Paralympics to another level in 2012. It'll be the biggest Games yet in terms of competitors, audience and profile. I want to use this opportunity to encourage people around the world to be part of the 2012 Paralympic experience. I hope the 2012 Games demonstrate how sport can unite across communities and highlight how many cultures are represented in the UK. Every nation really will have a home crowd to cheer them on.

Washout at New York

AFP, New York

Rain washed out all play at the US Open on Tuesday, leaving defending champion Rafael Nadal and title rival Andy Murray kicking their heels in frustration.

After delaying the start of play, organizers announced that a poor forecast had prompted them to cancel both the day and night sessions for Tuesday, the ninth day of the Grand Slam tournament.

Play was expected to resume on Wednesday morning.

The downpours again looked set to spark more questions over the decision by the Flushing Meadows authorities not to follow the lead of the Australian Open and Wimbledon in building a retractable roof over its main court.

Rain has bedevilled the tournament in recent times with the men's final, scheduled for the last Sunday of the fortnight, carried over to the Monday for the last three years.

Murray had been due to begin proceedings on the Arthur Ashe Stadium against Donald Young of the United States followed by Nadal's clash against Gilles Muller of Luxembourg.

In the day's other men's last 16 matches, Spain's David Ferrer had been scheduled to face former champion Andy Roddick with John Isner tackling Gilles Simon.

Also postponed were the first two women's quarterfinals, which pitted German Angelique Kerber against Italy's Flavia Pennetta and Samantha Stosur of Australia against Russian Vera Zvonareva.

Pallekele Test starts today

Australia and Sri Lanka clash in the second cricket Test in Pallekele from Thursday, relieved they will not be playing on a dustbowl like the one in Galle.

The controversial dry wicket in the first Test last week was described as "poor" by match referee Chris Broad and the International Cricket Council sought an explanation from Sri Lankan authorities.

Australia won the match by 125 runs as 40 wickets fell in four days -- 16 on the second day itself -- with 273 being the highest total in the Test.

Sri Lankan captain Tillakaratne Dilshan and his Australian counterpart Michael Clarke, who had both criticised the Galle wicket, said the one at the Pallekele International Stadium looked a much better surface.

"It's a good Test wicket," said Dilshan. Batting will be a lot easier and it could turn on the fourth and fifth days."

Clarke, hoping to put his first Test series as Australia's captain beyond Sri Lanka's reach, also seemed happy with the pitch on offer.

"It's a lot drier than it was yesterday, but I am sure it will play much better than the one at Galle," said Clarke.

"The wicket is compact, it is hard. It is very important to put up big scores whether you bat first or second. I also think spin will play a big part as the game progresses.'

The tourists had announced their playing XI in advance on Tuesday, with Shaun Marsh due to make his debut in place of Ricky Ponting, who returned home after Galle to await the birth of his second child.

The left-hander, son of former Australian opener Geoff Marsh, is not a novice to the big stage, having played in 35 one-day internationals and five Twenty20 games.

Sri Lanka, meanwhile, added promising seamer Shaminda Eranga and unorthodox spinner Ajantha Mendis to the 11 that played in Galle in a short-list of 13 announced by Dilshan.

Eranga, 25, who took part in the preceding one-day series, will be awarded a Test cap if left-arm seamer Chanaka Welegedara failed to recover from a knee injury suffered during training on Wednesday.

Mendis looked set to replace off-spinner Suraj Randiv, who claimed 2-76 in the first innings at Galle, but returned wicketless in the second despite the helpful track. Clarke said he was surprised Mendis did not play in Galle.

22 — -tat-

"He is a very good bowler with a lot of variations," the Australian captain said. "I will be very happy if he is again left out for this match.

Dilshan said the hosts had overcome the defeat in the first Test and were ready for the challenge ahead.

"This is a new game, a new wicket," the Sri Lankan captain said. "The confidence in the team is high. I am sure we will put up a much better performance here."

Clarke expected Sri Lanka to bounce back strongly in the series.

"I am pretty certain they will be tougher than they were in the first Test," he said. "There are a lot of good players in their team and we will have to be at our best if we want to win again.

The third and final Test of the series, Australia's first in Sri Lanka since 2004, will be played at the Sinhalese sports club in Colombo from September 16.

midfielder John Obi Mikel, had to take some trouble for his flight to London. Mikel went to the airport from where he was supposed to fly to London on a 2am flight, but a mistake from the ticketing agent had him waiting for some hours more. Mikel came back to the hotel and left on a later flight at around 7am, with a few more players. The rest of the Nigeria squad left by two more instalments, one at 7 pm on Wednesday and the last two hours later. Meanwhile, a hotel source said that the Nigerians were heard grunting among themselves about the lack of support they received from the local fans.

Done for by injuries SLC defends Galle wicket

Sri Lanka's cricket chief insisted Wednesday there was nothing wrong with the controversial wicket used in the first Test against Australia in Galle, saying no one got hurt. "In my opinion, the pitch was not dangerous. Nobody got hurt," Sri Lanka Cricket (SLC) chairman Upali Dharmadasa told AFP. "But we hope to start an inquiry next week."

The International Cricket Council (ICC) this week ordered a probe into the dry, dusty track and asked the SLC for an explanation after match referee Chris Broad described it as a poor pitch.

ICC General Manager (cricket) David Richardson and chief match referee Ranjan Madugalle will consider the evidence, including video footage and Sri Lanka Cricket's submissions, before reaching their decision.

Australia won the Test by 125 runs last week, which saw 40 wickets fall in under four days, 16 of them on the second day.

Dharmadasa brushed aside criticism of the pitch, saying over 800 runs were scored in the match, with Sri Lanka's Mahela Jayawardene making 105 and Australia's Mike Hussey a defiant 95.

bit tough on them." PTI, Southampton Indians stuck to their policy of playing Handed another demoralising defeat by England on a miserable tour, Indian captain

Mahendra Singh Dhoni bemoaned the injury-crisis that has hit his side, saying that all his plans fall apart due to the lack of options at his disposal.

India went down by seven wickets in the rain-curtailed second ODI and Dhoni said the bowling left a lot to be desired given that the batsmen had done a decent job by posting 187 in the 23-overs-a-side game.

"The bowling department needs to step up a bit. The strength of our bowlers is not speed but it didn't swing today. Also the variations in pace were not possible because the outfield was wet and the ball came on to the bat nicely," said Dhoni after England comfortably overhauled the 188run target.

"Presently it is becoming difficult to manoeuvre them around with just two bowlers. When the frontline bowlers go for runs, it becomes difficult. I tried Ashwin hoping he could upset their scoring but even he went for runs. The first five overs didn't work out for us," he added.

"Our fast bowlers are not deceptively quick. They are between the 128-132mph speed. If it is not swinging, it's difficult and a with seven batters even when it meant that Manoj Tiwary was almost straightaway drafted into the playing eleven literally after stepping out of aircraft.

"Our lower order batters can't score big against this bowling attack. Without six batters it becomes quite difficult to score runs. So if it is a low score, even five bowlers can't defend it.

"I thought 187 was a good score. But once they got 60 in first five overs and 100 in the first 10, they never really had to take any risk.'

Dhoni once again rued the injuries that have had a disastrous effect on his team's performances.

"Injuries have been a big concern. We have lost nine players and almost of them feature in the first eleven." The injury nightmare, however, wouldn't extend to young Ajinkya Rahane who batted with a runner during his knock of 54 on Tuesday.

"He felt a twist in his leg while turning. It's a bit of inflammation but as of now, he wouldn't miss the next game."

There had been a lot of criticism about the board's failure to ensure enough match practice for the team before the Zimbabwe tour, with many saying that it was one of the major reasons behind the debacle in Zimbabwe.

And that is why the BCB has been trying to arrange some practice matches against a strong foreign team from the subcontinent but there is a very slim chance that the players will get the opportunity as the BCB did not get any positive response from its Pakistan and Sri Lanka counterparts.

Kamal. If there is an issue with the cliques in the team, then similar questions have to be raised about the current board where grouping is very much visible and stagnating the activities of the existing sub-committee, rendering them incapable of running the show properly.

And because of unhealthy and unprofessional activities within the board it was possible to take the hard line against Shakib and Tamim without any previous warning, reprimanding and imposing fine against them.

There has been a question about poor management, and who will take the responsibility for that? If BCB was honest in their efforts to find out the real reasons behind the debacle, then they must form an independent inquiry committee as the reports from the officials of team management are not good enough and does not provide sufficient grounds for such a harsh decision. The board needs to take a holistic view into the problems plaguing the current setup before taking any decision regarding the failure in Zimbabwe. Instead, by taking this decision BCB not only killed any chance of addressing the deeper problems but also proved that they were not ready to face the truth. It's really alarming the way the board is operating and many are already fearful of the prospect of the BCB following the path of the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB). A fearful prospect indeed!
