

Move to ease gridlock in port city

The road from Barik Building to Bahaddarhat to be made off-limits to rickshaws from January

PRANABESH CHAKRABORTY

Chittagong Metropolitan Police (CMP) will make the road from Barik Building to Bahaddarhat off-limits to rickshaws from January next year in order to reduce traffic jam in the port.

The police have also asked four educational institutions in the area to arrange their own transports.

CMP and Chittagong City Corporation (CCC) will also launch a joint drive against the rickshaws plying the city roads without licence.

The CCC will also mark separate lanes for fast and slow moving vehicles within six months to implement the decisions, said the city corporation sources. Separate roads will also be constructed for different modes of transport.

Chittagong Development Authority (CDA), CCC, Bangladesh Road Transport Authority (BRTA), transport owners and workers' organisations and high officials took the decision at a meeting at the CMP headquarters on Sunday.

To create awareness among the drivers and the helpers, a training programme will also be organised within two weeks with the help of BRTA, CCC and CMP sources said.

A team will also monitor the training programme and evaluate it.

The city corporation has been asked to mark zebra crossing on the roads within six months to create a pedestrian-friendly environment in the city.

CMP Commissioner Abul Kashem told The Daily Star that the decision was taken to lessen the gridlock on the road from Barik Building to Bahaddarhat, life-line of the city.

Construction of parking zones in specific areas is necessary for developing the traffic system in the port city, he said, adding that the CDA had approved designs of parking zones of many commercial organisations. But they had constructed their buildings without keeping adequate parking space that caused traffic congestion in the city, the commissioner said.

"Many schools, colleges and universities are mushrooming the roadside areas without arranging their own transports", he said. The guardians also create gridlock during the institutions' starting and closing hours as they take their children by their own transports.

transportations, he said many reputed educational institutions have no central transportation system for their students.

Kashem said roadside schools are causing gridlock.

Mohammad Kamrul Islam, a resident of Jamal Khan, told The Daily Star that the streets in the area get stuck in a severe gridlock during the school and college hours due to parking of the private vehicles, obstructing the vehicular movement.

Shahin Khan, a resident of Two Number Gate area, said it takes from one hour to two every day to go to Agrabad from Bahaddarhat due to traffic jam, without which it would have taken only 25 to 30 minutes.

CMP Deputy Commissioner (Traffic) Faruque Ahmed said, "If we could free the busy intersections from rickshaws, 80 percent of the traffic congestion in the city would be reduced."

Seven educational institutions have been identified due to which the traffic congestion occurs in the port city, CMP sources said. Of the seven, four have been asked to arrange their own transportation for their students, CMP sources said.

The schools are Ispahani Public School and College, Khastagir Govt Girls' High School, Bangladesh Mahila Samity Girls' High School and Chittagong Grammar School.

CMP Assistant Police Commissioner (Traffic) Muhammad Shahidullah told The Daily Star that giving priority to the problem, they are making a plan for the rickshaws.

Engineer Subhash Barua, a town planner and also an expert on road and traffic management, said decisions had been taken many times before which did not see light of the day.

Terming the decisions time befitting, Subhash said the city corporation should take necessary steps, including alternative rickshaw ways for the benefit of the rickshaw-pullers before implementing the decisions. He stressed on mass transportation to lessen the traffic congestion in the city.

The number of rickshaws plying the city streets are triple to what the streets can handle.

Around 35,000 rickshaws are registered in the port city but CMP traffic department and CCC say that around 1.5 lakh rickshaws ply the city roads.

Violence against women on rise

ARUN BIKASH DEY

Incidents of violence against women are increasing in Chittagong day by day, although different rights groups have been continuing campaign to create awareness about the menace.

A recent research conducted by Chittagong Social Development Forum (CSDF) on "Violence against women in Chittagong" revealed 2,367 incidents of torture, rape, kidnapping and violence against women that were recorded by different courts on repression of women and children in Chittagong from January 2011 to November 2011.

Of them, 422 women were raped, 38 kidnapped and 33 committed suicide following torture by family members and the rest were tortured by their husbands or others over dowry.

This research reveals that about 47 percent of women are tortured during their conjugal lives by their husbands and relatives of their in-laws' houses.

The women rights activists said the figures do not show the real scenario of violence against women as the actual number of incidents is much more than the figure recorded in the research. Many of the victims do not even file complaints with police as society is yet to stand strongly by women tortured by men, they said, adding that many women, after being tortured, do not complain against their husbands or other members of their in-laws' houses for the sake of maintaining their conjugal lives.

The research says that incidents of torture against women are not properly addressed as the society is male-dominated. Moreover, lack of exemplary punishment of such incidents encourages the perpetrators to repeat the crimes.

Jesmin Sultana Paru, a human rights activist and general secretary of CSDF, said women have been tortured since the primitive age. "As women now have become more conscious than before they make complaints against this type of unjust treatment to rights activists like us and so we come to know about these," she said.

Premier University Vice Chancellor Dr Anupam Sen said, "Our society is now a transitional society. It is turning into an industry-based society from agricultural one."

He said as urbanisation was going on rapidly, tension hammers people in their day to day lives that triggered husbands to torture their wives over trivial matters.

Safia Gazi Rahman, principle of Sunshine Grammar School and College, said it is the duty of institutions to teach people to honour women. As the institutions are not playing proper role in this regard, women are being tortured in many ways and the incidents of torturing are increasing day by day, she said.

Safia said members of her institution are taught about the equal rights of men and women. They are also taught to respect every person irrespective of their race, sex, religious belief and economical or social status, she said.
