The main aim is to ease passengers' suffering and reduce the gridlock in Sadarghat area, Shipping Minister Shahjahan Khan told The Daily Star yesterday.

The final decision to start construction will be taken within this week or the next, he said.

War heroines look for solace in trial of war criminals

BSS, Dhaka

Twenty-one Biranganas (war heroines) of Sirajganj, who survived after being dishonored by the Pakistani military junta and their collaborators in 1971, now eagerly wait to see some of those perpetrators being punished in the ongoing war crimes trial.

Sharing their horrific stories of torture and survival during the War of Liberation, these war heroines longed to witness the verdict against the war criminals before their death.

During the nine-month long war, Pakistani soldiers along with their collaborators like Razakars, Al-Badars and Al-Shams dragged away women from their homes, subjecting them to sexual abuse and extreme physical torture at the army camps.

"I was repeatedly raped and tortured by four Pakistani army personnel who forcibly dragged me away while I was going to the field to feed my brother," said a war heroine.
