RHD engineers seek 'protection' from ministry

Their demand comes amid ACC enquiry about projects to find graft

M ABUL KALAM AZAD

Fearful of the widening net of Anti-Corruption Commission surveillance on them, a few hundred Roads and Highways Department engineers yesterday demanded that no organisation other than the communications ministry take action against them should they make or have made any mistakes.

They also demanded that the ministry should take responsibility for their activities. They made the demand at a meeting, held at the RHD auditorium, attended by Communications Minister Obaidul Quader, Communications Secretary Monzor Hossain and Joint Secretary (development) of the Communications Ministry Farid Uddin Ahmed. The meeting was also attended by nearly 250 engineers from across the country.

However, the communications minister, having delivered a brief speech, left the meeting before the engineers

Earth has 2 moons!

ANI, London

The Earth has always had a temporary second moon, new study has claimed.

When astronomers caught sight of a mysterious titanium white object circling around the Earth in 2006, they assumed it was a spent rocket.

But it was actually a small asteroid captured by the Earth's gravitational field that rotated around the Earth until June 2007.

In the new study, astrophysicists at Cornell claim that this little moon was

A third of South Asians made to pay bribes

Finds Transparency Int'l survey

AFP, Kathmandu

More than one in three South Asians say they were forced to bribe officials in the last year, mainly for services they were legally entitled to, an international anti-graft watchdog said yesterday.

A survey released by Berlin-based Transparency International in the Nepalese capital Kathmandu showed bribery has become so endemic that the region is second only to sub-Saharan Africa as the corruption hotspot of the world.

The watchdog surveyed 7,800 people in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nepal, Sri Lanka and the Maldives, finding 40 per cent had paid backhanders over the last 12 months to public servants, with police being the largest recipients.

Two thirds of Indians, Bangladeshis and Pakistanis who dealt with the police last year said they had paid bribes to Cars with shattered windows are parked on a street after a wave of attacks in Baghdad killed at least 57 people yesterday. The apparently coordinated blasts were the first major sign of violence in a row that has threatened Iraq's fragile political truce and heightened sectarian tensions just days after US forces completed their withdrawal.

It was a mistake on both sides

Nato, US say about killing of 24 Pak troops last month

AP, Kabul

An investigation into a Nato attack that killed 24 Pakistani troops last month near the Afghan border has concluded that a combination of mistrust and bad maps led to the air strikes on two Pakistani outposts, the US Department of Defence and a Nato official said yesterday.

It's unclear whether the report, which says mistakes were made on both sides, will reduce the tension between Pakistan and the US over the incident. The Pakistani army has said its troops did nothing wrong and claimed the attack was a deliberate act of aggression.

A statement issued by the US Department of Defence did not apologise for the attack, as the Pakistanis have demanded, and instead defended the actions of American forces.

"The report says we recognise we made mistakes, and that mistakes were also made by the Pakistanis," said the Nato official, who could not be named because the Defence Department's investigation has not yet been made public.

"We have a lot of work to do to improve coordination, and we've already implemented steps to do that," the official said.

Cold-related diseases spread across country

STAR REPORT

More people succumbed to cold-related ailments yesterday as a severe cold wave with dense fog is sweeping through length and breadth of the country for more than a week.

In the last four days, at least 27 people died of cold-related afflictions in Thakurgaon, Jamalpur, Jessore, Rangpur and Satkhira, report our district correspondents.

The bone-chilling weather added to the misery of the poor and disadvantaged people in the capital and elsewhere with the sun remaining almost invisible for the last nine days.

Thousands of the vulnerable people have been passing days miserably due to lack of warm clothes and foods as initiatives by the government and different non-government organisations are inadequate.

As people are forced to stay indoors by the cold spell, business and official activities are hampered while students' attendance in schools and colleges has become thin.
