

Romney set for New Hampshire win

AFP, Concord

Republican White House hopefuls faced New Hampshire voters yesterday in a first-in-the-nation primary which is all but certain to strengthen frontrunner Mitt Romney's hold on the nomination.

Analysts were eager to see how well the former Massachusetts governor and millionaire venture capitalist does compared to polls that have consistently given him a big lead in the bellwether state and to see who comes in second.

Romney hopes a romp -- after a narrow win in the Iowa caucuses last week -- will propel him into South Carolina's January 21 primary -- the first in the South, where his more conservative rivals sense their best shot at a victory.

By tradition, the first ballots in New Hampshire were cast shortly after midnight in two tiny towns with a combined turnout of 32 voters.

In Dixville Notch (population 75) Romney tied former US China envoy Jon Huntsman with two votes each out of nine cast. In Hart's Location (population 42) Romney was the most favoured Republican with five votes.

Voting began at several statewide locations at 6:00am.

New Hampshire officials expect around 325,000 voters to head to the polls, most of them Republicans because Democratic President Barack Obama is running unopposed for his party's nomination ahead of the November 6 elections.

Gilani not an 'honest' man

Pak SC warns PM as rift widens with govt

PTI, Islamabad

Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani is not an honest man as he had not lived up to his constitutional oath, Pakistan's Supreme Court said yesterday, as it warned of action against him for failing to act on an order to reopen graft cases against President Asif Ali Zardari.

Piling pressure on PPP-led beleaguered government, a five-judge bench, which had taken up the issue of implementing the apex court's verdict striking down a graft amnesty that benefited Zardari, said in its order that Gilani was not an "honourable man" as he had not lived up to his constitutional oath.

The premier had shown loyalty to his political party rather than the Constitution, the bench said.

"Prima facie, the prime minister is not an honest man and violated his oath," the bench said in its order.

The bench contended that the Pakistan People's Party-led government's refusal to write a letter to Swiss authorities to reopen cases of alleged money laundering against Zardari went against the Constitution and the Quran.

The bench listed six options for the government, including action against the premier for contempt of court and declaring Gilani ineligible to be a member of parliament for five years and referred the case to Chief Justice Iftikhar Gilani. The bench recommended that the Chief Justice form a larger bench to hear the matter on January 16.

The apex court struck down the National Reconciliation Ordinance

(NRO), a graft amnesty issued by former President Pervez Musharraf that benefited Zardari and over 8,000 others in 2009.

Since then, the court has been pressuring the government to write to Swiss authorities to reopen the money laundering cases against Zardari.

The five-judge bench headed by Justice Asif Saeed Khosa had earlier set January 10 as the deadline for the government to implement the apex court's order on the NRO.

The government has refused to act on the court's orders, saying the president enjoys immunity from prosecution under the Constitution.

During an interview last week, Zardari made it clear that the government would not approach the Swiss authorities as long as he was in office.

The confrontation between the PPP and the judiciary over the NRO comes at a time when the Supreme Court is pressuring the government over an alleged memo that had sought US help to stave off a feared military coup in Pakistan last year.

RIFT WITH GOVT Kayani meets top army officials

DAWN ONLINE

Chief of Army Staff General Ashfaq Pervez Kayani held an informal meeting with senior military officials at the Army General Headquarters (GHQ) yesterday following his return from China, DawnNews reported.

The Army chief was briefed about Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani's recent interview to a Chinese newspaper concerning Kayani and DG ISI Shuja Pasha's statements to the Supreme Court.

According to sources, a detailed statement is expected soon from the Pakistani military on the PM's interview. Sources also say that the following 24 hours are extremely important as far as civil-military relations are concerned.

Malnutrition a national shame: Manmohan

OUR CORRESPONDENT, New Delhi

As a survey made public yesterday reported high level of malnutrition among children in India, Prime Minister Manmohan Singh said the problem of malnutrition "is a matter of national shame".

Despite impressive growth in our GDP, the level of under-nutrition in the country is unacceptably high. We have also not succeeded in reducing this rate fast enough", he said while releasing the Hunger and Malnutrition report in New Delhi.

There are, Singh pointed out, nearly 16 crore children in the country below the age of 6 years. "In the years to come these children will join our work-force as scientists, as farmers, as teachers, as data operators, as artisans, as service providers. Several of them will become social workers like many of you in this hall".

"The health of our economy and society lies in the health of this generation. We cannot hope for a healthy future for our country with a large number of malnourished children", he said.

"I have said earlier on a number of occasions and I repeat that the problem of malnutrition is a matter of national shame. Despite impressive growth in our GDP, the level of under-nutrition in the country is unacceptably high. We have also not succeeded in reducing this rate fast enough", prime minister added.

The survey carried out by the Citizen's Alliance against Malnutrition, the Nandi Foundation, Mahindra and Mahindra and other partners and supporters of the Alliance covered more than 73,000 households in 112 districts across 9 states.

Egypt election enters final leg

REUTERS, Cairo

Islamists aimed to cement control over Egypt's lower house of parliament as a final phase of voting began yesterday, while a secular party's plan to boycott elections for the upper chamber threatened to weaken the liberal bloc.

Banned under Hosni Mubarak, the Muslim Brotherhood has emerged as a major winner from the uprising that toppled him, exploiting a well-organised support base in the first free legislative vote in decades.

Islamists of various stripes are expected to win 60 percent of the 498 elected seats in the assembly's lower house, with the Brotherhood taking some 41 percent, by its own count.

Its showing will give it a stronger role in shaping a new constitution and make it a force to be reckoned with for the country's military rulers, but the Brotherhood has promised for now to cooperate with the army-backed government.

Keen to present itself as a potential government-in-waiting, the Brotherhood has portrayed a moderate image, distancing itself from street protests by pro-democracy activists demanding the army relinquish power immediately.

Egypt's staggered three-stage parliamentary election began on November 28 and drew an unprecedented turnout.

Under a complex system, a third of the seats are reserved for individuals, and some of these will be decided in the runoffs. The other two thirds are decided by proportional representation among party lists.

The lower house will hold its first session on January 23.

Bereavement raises heart attack risk

BBC ONLINE

The newly bereaved are at greatly increased risk of heart attack after the death of a close loved one, US researchers say.

Heart attack risk is 21 times higher within the first day and six times higher than normal within the first week, a study in the Circulation journal of nearly 2,000 people shows.

Symptoms to watch for include chest pain and shortness of breath.

Experts say intense grief puts extra strain on the heart.

The psychological stress associated with loss can raise heart rate, blood pressure and blood clotting, which, in turn, can increase the chance of a heart attack.

A person's sleep and appetite are also likely to be disrupted.

SYRIA UNREST

Assad blames on conspiracy

AFP, Damascus

Syria's President Bashar al-Assad blamed foreign plotters yesterday for the deadly 10-month-old protests against his regime and vowed to crush their "terrorism" with an iron fist.

In a rare speech just hours before the UN Security Council was to discuss Syria, Assad denied that security forces had orders to open fire on civilian protesters, even as activists reported 10 youths were shot dead by regime gunmen at a peaceful rally.

Assad said the unrest, which the United Nations estimated last month has cost more than 5,000 lives since March, would only come to an end "when the flow of funds and weapons coming from abroad stops."

"Regional and international parties who are trying to destabilise Syria can no longer falsify the facts and events," the embattled leader said in the nearly two-hour televised speech.

He hit out at emigre opponents of his rule, accusing them of being tools of foreign powers.

He said a new constitution being drawn up by a committee set up in October to replace the current one, which enshrines his Baath party's dominant role, could be put to a popular vote as

⇒ No order given to fire on civilians
⇒ March vote on new Syria constitution
⇒ Vows iron fist against 'terrorists'

early as March.

Assad said restoring security was the "absolute priority" for Syria and pledged his government would tackle terrorism with an "iron fist," after a Damascus suicide bombing killed 26 people on Friday.

"There can be no let-up for terrorism -- it must be hit with an iron fist," he said.

He also hit out at the Arab League involving the withdrawal of troops from towns and cities and the opening of negotiations with the opposition.

He asked what right governments whose countries belong to the pan-Arab organisation, including the absolute monarchies of the Gulf, had to lecture Syria about democracy or reform.

The Syrian National Council, the largest opposition umbrella group, branded Assad's speech an "incitement to violence," indicating "more criminal behaviour" by the regime.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said at least 11 civilians were killed by security force fire yesterday, 10 at a demonstration in Deir Ezzor in the northeast and the other at a checkpoint in the central city of Homs.

NEWS IN brief

Iran jamming Al-Jazeera

AFP, Dubai

Iran is accused of jamming broadcasts by Qatar-based news channel Al-Jazeera, satellite operator Arabsat said in a statement received yesterday.

The satellite television on Sunday announced a new frequency for Arabsat viewers due to "continued interference."

The influential channel has been criticised by many Arab governments for its coverage of the anti-regime uprisings which have swept the region since the start of 2011.

Thailand to pay protest victims

AFP, Bangkok

Thailand yesterday agreed a $63 million pot to compensate all victims of years of political unrest and aid reconciliation in the deeply divided nation, a government spokeswoman said.

The fund will pay out for all deaths and injuries sustained in a string of violent protests since 2005, involving the arch nationalist Yellow Shirts, the mainly rural working-class Red Shirts and several smaller factions.

Families of those who lost their lives will be paid $142,000 plus $8,000 for funeral expenses.

Israel backs India in UNSC bid

PTI, Jerusalem

Describing India as the "greatest democracy on earth", Israel has said it wants New Delhi to become a permanent member of the expanded United Nations Security Council.

Welcoming external affairs minister S M Krishna, the first Indian foreign minister to arrive in Israel in over a decade, President Shimon Peres said Tel Aviv was following New Delhi with "great care and interest".

"I wish that India would become a permanent member of the Security Council," Peres said, backing India's bid to become a permanent member of the UN's top body.

Libya given $20b of freed assets

AFP, Tripoli

Libya received roughly $20 billion in assets that were held overseas by Muammar Gaddafi's regime and frozen during the conflict that ousted him, the country's foreign minister said yesterday.

An estimated $150 billion of Gaddafi's overseas assets were frozen following United Nations Security Council sanctions against his regime during the popular uprising and civil war that led to the veteran dictator's downfall.

Nigeria fuel strike hits 2nd day

AFP, Lagos

Gangs set up burning roadblocks, police fired tear gas and businesses shut in Nigeria yesterday, the second day of a national strike that has paralysed the country and left six people dead.

As thousands took to the streets to protest soaring fuel costs, youth gangs set up roadblocks of burning tyres along major roads in Lagos and threw stones at cars while extorting cash from drivers.

The indefinite strike follows the government's controversial move to end fuel subsidies on January 1, which caused petrol prices to more than double in a country where most of the 160 million population lives on less than $2 a day.

Tension over protest kinds of demonstrations on campus until further notice. The ban will be effective from 10:00am today, Vice-chancellor Mejbah Uddin Ahmed told The Daily Star yesterday.

At least 600 students under the banner of "Pragotisheel Chhatra Jote" joined a prescheduled agitation in front of the vice-chancellor's office around 10:00am and stayed there till 3:30pm.

Several marches were also brought out on the campus, as yesterday was the last date for admission to first-year honours courses.

While the demonstrations were going on, the university administration led by the VC sat in a meeting with leaders of the demonstrating students, but the meeting could not reach a settlement.

The student leaders said they will continue their agitation until the administration cancels the Tk 5,000 development fee.

"We again requested the VC to cancel the extra fee at the meeting, but he and other officials didn't pay any heed," a student leader said.

"So we decided to boycott classes and exams for an indefinite period," he added.

Assistant Proctor Dr Ashok Kumar Saha told The Daily Star that the decision of imposing a ban on demonstrations on campus was made following the meeting, as some leaders of left leaning student organisations threatened to create anarchy and hamper academic activities.

"We asked the students to carry ID cards, no one will be allowed to enter the campus without ID cards, so that outsiders can't create any chaos," he said.

Several hundred police personnel were deployed on the campus to maintain law and order, said Syed Faruq Hossain, public relations officer of the university.

The university administration has been charging freshers Tk 5,000 on top of their admission fees for the institution's development purposes since 2005 when Jagannath University College was upgraded to the status of a full-fledged university.

valuable. Sayedee served as the treasurer of that fund," said the lawmaker for Pirojpur before the International Crimes Tribunal.

Awal, alias Saydur Rahman, told the court he and other freedom fighters began preparing for the War after the March 7 speech by Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. He remained in Pirojpur till the first part of April. Later he went to Morrelganj in Bagerhat as the Pakistani forces approached Pirojpur.

He said after receiving training in India they returned on August 14 and attacked a camp of Pakistani soldiers and collaborators in Morrelganj.

They later set up a freedom fighters' camp in the Sundarbans from where they conducted operations, he added.

After the camp became larger in size and operation, they decided to deploy civilian spies in different areas, Earlier, the court began its proceedings at 10:42am after Sayedee was taken to the dock. Awal, 58, started his deposition three minutes later.

Awal, alias Saydur Rahman, told the court he and other freedom fighters began preparing for the War after the March 7 speech by Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. He remained in Pirojpur till the first part of April. Later he went to Morrelganj in Bagerhat as the Pakistani forces approached Pirojpur.

He said after receiving training in India they returned on August 14 and attacked a camp of Pakistani soldiers and collaborators in Morrelganj.

They later set up a freedom fighters' camp in the Sundarbans from where they conducted operations, he added.

After the camp became larger in size and operation, they decided to deploy civilian spies in different areas, headed.

Mahabubur Rahman, Raisuddin Poshari and Shahiduddin Poshari Siraj were the spies for Parerhaat.

The freedom fighters learned what was going on in different parts of the district through these civilian sources, said the legislator.

He added Pakistani soldiers came to Pirojpur in May 1971.

It was after that, he said, in the end of May, that initiative was taken to form the peace committee in Pirojpur. The committee was formed afterwards, he said.

"However, I can't mention the exact date as I don't remember it."

The peace committee at Parerhaat was formed under the leadership of Sekandar Sikder. The collaborator force was constituted after that, he said.

Though Awal could remember that Danesh Molla held important position in both committees, he could not recall which post the collaborator held.

"After the Pakistani army came to Parerhaat, as they spoke Urdu, I heard they [collaborators] included Delawar Hossain Sayedee saheb for better communication," said Awal.

He said he heard from his sources that Pakistani soldiers along with collaborators looted many stores in Parerhaat.

As Parerhaat was home to many Hindus and Awami League supporters, it experienced many incidents of plundering, rapes, arsons and killings, he added.

Houses of Nurul Islam, Manik Poshari, Shahiduddin Poshari and Raisuddin Poshari along with other Hindu community members were torched at the villages of Chithalia and Badura of Shankarpasha union, he said.

"I saw those burnt houses after independence. I heard Danesh Molla, Sekandar Sikder and Sayedee saheb were with them [arsonists]."

Suicide blast hits Afghan govt building

AFP, Kabul

At least two policemen were killed when a group of suicide bombers stormed a government building in southeastern Afghanistan yesterday, the interior ministry and officials said.

Two attackers blew themselves up in the attack, one other was killed in an exchange of fire with police, while one remaining suicide bomber remained at large.

Police had surrounded the building, which houses the directorate of communication in Sharana, the capital city of Paktika province.

In the gun battle "two policemen were killed and one wounded", while two attackers were also killed.

After independence, many collaborators escaped, some were captured and some were beaten to death by the mobs. Sayedee however could not be found in Pirojpur, he added.

He said the collaborators handed one Bhagirathi of Pirojpur over to Pakistani soldiers suspecting that she was a spy of the freedom fighters. She was tied to a jeep and dragged across the town before Pakistani forces shot her to death on the bank of the Baleshwar river.

Awal also described another incident in which one Omar Faruk of Pirojpur was handed over to the Pakistani soldiers. They inserted 13 steel rods with Bangladeshi flags into Faruk's body and asked him, 'bol shala! Joy Bangla bol!'

The Pirojpur MP completed his deposition at 12:10pm, after which the court went to an early lunch recess, almost half an hour in advance to allow the defence some time for preparations.

After the court resumed at 2:00pm, Awal told the tribunal that he mistakenly said that Pakistani soldiers came to Pirojpur in the end of May.

In fact, the army came to Pirojpur in the first half of May, he told the court adding that the error caught his eyes when he was reading his recorded testimony.

He said he became distracted by the conversation between the prosecution and the defence and mistakenly said that.

The tribunal decided to record it as an explanation from the witness following his testimony.

The defence however objected to the move saying it has no legal basis. They said the prosecution should re-examine the witness and add the information in the re-examination.

However, the court decided to add the explanation as a record of the court proceedings for future reference.
