I am very happy to know that Daffodil International University is going to hold its third convocation on 26 February 2012.

Quality of education at tertiary level remains a question of big concern for decades. Quality education in higher educational institutions is key to socio-economic progress of a nation. Apart from some renowned public universities, the endeavors of some private universities to improve the quality of higher education and develop world-class human resources are appreciable. It is, indeed, encouraging that Daffodil International University has been trying to contribute positively to improve the quality of higher education in our country with special emphasis on ICT.

My heartiest congratulations to all graduating students and their parents, faculty members and management of the university.
