Hectic lobbying for BNP secy general post

Party's national executive body meets tomorrow

RAKIB HASNET SUMAN

Hectic lobbying is going on in BNP for the post of secretary general ahead of its National Executive Committee meeting tomorrow.

Most of the senior leaders favour Mirza Fakhrul Islam Alamgir, the present acting secretary general, for the vital position while a few others have been opposing the move.

"I think he [Fakhrul] has done well. But it is only the chairperson who can decide on this," party Vice-chairman Abdullah Al Noman told The Daily Star.

The former minister believes the party men will be happy to see Fakhrul in the new role.

The issue of picking the new secretary general will not come for discussion at the executive committee meeting, said central leader Ruhul Quddus Talukder Dulu.

"We will discuss the next course of our agitation programme as we have to go for an all-out movement against the government," added Ruhul, also president of the party's Natore district unit.

WAR CRIMES TRIAL

Move to amend law for case transfer

Govt wants to ensure quick disposal of cases, coordination between 2 tribunals

ASHUTOSH SARKAR

The government is to amend the International Crimes (Tribunals) Act, 1973, this week so that the tribunals can transfer each other's cases for their quick disposal, Law Minister Shafique Ahmed said yesterday.

Two international crimes tribunals have been formed so far under this law for disposal of the cases relating to crimes against humanity committed during the Liberation War of Bangladesh in 1971.

The law minister yesterday told The Daily Star that his ministry would place the amendment proposal before the next cabinet meeting on April 9.

After the cabinet approves the amendment proposal, it will be executed through an ordinance that will be issued by the president of the republic, and then it will be placed for passage in the coming parliament session," he said.

The first tribunal, which was formed on March 25, 2010, has been dealing with eight cases while the second tribunal formed on March 22 this year was dealing with just one.

As per the amendment provision, a tribunal would be able to transfer cases to another tribunal on its own or following a petition by the chief prosecutor, Shafique said.

North of Mali independent

Declare rebels; world condemns; Islamist militia opposes move

AFP, Bamako

Mali's Tuareg rebels yesterday declared independence in the north, a move shot down by Islamist insurgents and the international community, as fears loomed of a humanitarian disaster.

Africa and Europe roundly rejected the National Movement for the Liberation of Azawad's (MNLA) declaration of independence as a chorus of calls mounted for a solution to the crisis which has split the coup-wrecked nation in two.

Britain said it was temporarily closing its embassy in Mali due to the "unstable" situation and "lack of constitutional rule".

A democratic success since its last coup 21 years ago, Mali is now roughly divided into a rebel-controlled north and junta-controlled south and a group of radical Islamists have exploited the chaos to swoop in and install sharia.

The Islamist group, Ansar Dine, moved in alongside the MNLA but has given short shrift to their independence plans.

"Our war is a holy war. It's a legal war in the name of Islam. We are against rebellions. We are against independence. We are against revolutions not in the name of Islam,"
