Promoting Child Rights

CHILD Promoting Child Rights

Forum (BBF), suggested the government to set up standards for the corporate houses to ensure quality provide tax holiday to the corpo-

Regarding the sixth principle -- all businesses should use marketing and advertising that respect KCME director said promotional and support children's right -- the strategies can be built by involving rate houses so that they are inspired to retain standards.

Businesses have a role to play in ensuring children's rights

MD FAZLUR RAHMAN

ANGLADESH is far from introducing comprehensive policies on child rights in its is still struggling to eliminate child labour from industries, especially from Bangladesh's businesses still prioritise child labour. As a result, they are far from meeting all internationally recognised labour standards, which would not only prevent them from engaging child labour but also make them respect all aspects of lives that affect children directly and indirectly Some leading chamber leaders and businessmen have also admitted that it would take some more time before Bangladesh can actually enforce a comprehensive policy on child labour that respects all rights of children and protects them from all forms of abuses. There are over 60 million children in Bangladesh, which is nearly 40 per cent of the country's total population. And half of these children continue to live below the poverty line, according to Save the Children Bangladesh's child labour issue has also drawn attention at the recent hearing on the country's human rights conditions at US Congress.

Eric Biel, the acting associate deputy labour undersecretary for Internationa Affairs, told the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission on July 19 last that child labour, unsafe working conditions, and impediments to form unior persist in Bangladesh, particularly in the ready-made garment and shrimp processing industries.

Biel said the US Department of Labour's Bureau of International Labour Affairs (ILAB) is compiling reports on forced and child labour in the garment and shrimp industries of

At the same hearing, Tim Ryan, Asia regional programme director of the American Center for International Labour Solidarity, said child labour the ready-made garment sector has decreased, but at least 7 million chil dren still work in Bangladesh, mostly in agriculture, manufacturing, mining domestic service, hotels and restau rants, and shrimp and the seafood

The Tom Lantos Human Rights promote internationally recognised human rights norms in a non-partisan

Child labour engaged in hazardous die-casting work PHOTO: ANISUR RAHMAN

Till date, recognition of the responsibility of business towards children has often been focused on preventing have formulated a guideline for the can help establish child rights industries, which, if enforced properly, Principles" also highlight the diversity of ways in which business affects children. This includes the impact of overall business operations such as products and services and their marketing well as through businesses' relation ships with national and local govern-promote their survival, growth and each of our factories, outlets and "We strictly avoid child labour in other trading houses. The percentage of child labour in our business group is completely zero. If any one wishes to investigate this we will surely welpaign programmes in the communities located adjacent to our factories

Apart from refraining from well-being," he maintained.

"The Children's Rights and Business upporting children's rights requires or eliminating child labour. This is the ousinesses to both prevent harm and picture not only of Bangladesh but also actively safeguard children's interests. n many developed countries. By integrating respect and support for While reinforcing standards and children's rights into the core strategies actions necessary to prevent and elimiand operations, they can strengthen nate child labour. United Nations their existing corporate sustainability Children Organisation (UNICEF), the initiatives while ensuring benefits for Global Compact and Save the Children their business.

Such efforts can build reputation, improve risk management and secure their 'social license to operate'. A commitment to children can also help recruit and maintain a motivated rkforce. Supporting employees in their roles as parents and caregivers and promoting youth employment and talent generation are just some of the concrete steps that businesses can ments, and investments in local com-

UNICEF thinks respecting and take, according to the UN agency

Considering how products and needs can also be a source of innovation and create new markets. Finally, working for children helps build strong, well-educated communities that are vital to a stable, and inclusive and sustainable business environme Babgladesh has, however, made quite a number of progresses. The country has made significant progress towards attaining the child-elated Millennium Development Goals. Primary school enrolment has been rising, with 86 per cent of prinary-school-age girls and 85 per cent of primary school-age boys enrolled in 2009. Bangladesh has achieved close to arget gender parity in primary and secondary education. Latifur Rahman, chairman of Franscom Group, one of the leading business groups in Bangladesh, said rom a business perspective, there is no competition between what is social esponsibility and what is good for "A responsible business ensures that products and services are safe for everyone. A responsible business does not employ a child as a labour.' The winner of Oslo Business for Peace Award 2012 said Bangladesh ha almost eliminated child labour from he formal sector. "We have a control in organised sector. The country's child labourers are mostly employed in the unorgar ised sector such as small factories and keep them in school. We will have to give financial incentive so that paren also need to work in the rural areas where there is vast number of child services sector. And I do not see any Rahman said people should keep in mind that these children are not doing jobs for fun. "This is a basic question we have to address. We have to The minister said many children strengthen our efforts so that we can do not send them for work." He said businesses should also eceive support from governmen children are still involved in risky policies and regulations in order to works. The government has formuprotect child rights. "We need to have consciousness as a nation. He stressed on the importance of ensuring education of children so that they become more productive citizens Rahman said development partne

Shirin Sharmin Chowdhury, State Minister for Women and Childre about the issue, she told The Daily would gradually eliminate child labour in line with its pledges made in the

She said Bangladesh's child labou issue has to be considered in the light of the country's total situation. "We cannot say that we should be able to eliminate it overnight. It may not be possible. There are still about 30 per cent people below the poverty line and many of them are women and chil-

She said the country's child rights situation would improve in parallel with the improvement in poverty scenario, and child abuse would be

"Thirteen per cent of children in Bangladesh are still involved in child labour. Child labourers are frequently denied an education and are vulnerable to violence and abuse."

Chowdhury said the government has taken up some projects to withdraw 55,000 child labourers from the risky working condition, and bring them back to normal life.

are still stuck in risky job situations and the government is giving priority to withdraw them from those She said about 15 lakh to 20 lakh lated a Child Labour Elimination Policy to eradicate the social menac For Chowdhury, child rights are a major issue, which covers their education, health, nutrition and entertainment needs. "If the country can ensure women-friendly and child-friendly environment then the child rights will be easily ensured." The government has taken up some awareness raising programr

Chowdhury said the business community is also doing some activities dedicated to the welfare of the children under their corporate social

"The businesses have a role to play and some of them are doing the work. On behalf of the government, we are also encouraging the businesses to do more as we want that the private sector comes forward.

Thirteen per cent of children in Bangladesh are still involved in child labour. Child labourers are frequently denied an education and are vulnerable to violence and abuse, according to the UNICEF. Business leaders also said time has come for them to concentrate on all aspects of child rights, rather than only remain committed to stopping use of children as labour in the Shafiul Islam Mohiuddin, president of Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BGMEA), said the BGMEA has created a model for the whole world when it began eliminating child labour from the RMG units. "We rehabilitated the children. We arranged education for them. Some of them returned to factories after completing education and some have moved to other areas," he said. He said everybody has to think about Bangladesh's socio-economic condition when it deals with all forms of child rights. "The garment industry has played a key role in eradicating child labour from the ndustry. But there is a national deficiency in fighting child labour across

Asif Ibrahim, president of Dhaka Chamber of Commerce and Industry (DCCI), said when ILO convention was made effective, BGMEA actively took steps and eliminated child labour from the sector

"The businesses also took measures and monitored the situation." He said the country's business community are concerned about child rights. "We are conscious about their rights. At the same time, I also think that we need to do more to protect and uphold their rights."

"The business community should lead from the front in protecting all aspects of child rights," said Ibrahim who is also a leading exporter of 'Child labour is the main form of violation of child rights' gained momentum over the years.

Now people are much more aware

"As child labour is the main

Tariq-ul-Islam, Secretary, Ministry of Women and Children Affairs talks to The Daily Star

than before." The main concern of the govhas been conducting mas ernment is to end child labour i ✓ sive campaign against the country. That is why the exist child labour, it is yet to take any ing laws in Bangladesh mainly focus on elimination of child effective initiative to pursue the labour, he said. corporate business bodies to integrate business principles respecting and supporting children rights form of violation of child rights in their policy.

our existing laws strictly prohibit child labour both in formal and "Till now we have not taken such initiatives. As and when the informal sectors," he said. Apart from enforcement of issue comes up for discussion, we will seriously think of it," said laws, the government, in collabo Tariq-ul-Islam, secretary of the ration with the non-government Ministry of Women and Childre organisations, is conducting different advocacy campaigns to discourage child labour and to But the business bodies, them protect child rights, he said. selves, are now very much aware about child rights and running He also opined for strengthen their businesses complying with ing such advocacy programmes

Child labour performing risky welding job.

MAHBUBUR RAHMAN KHAN

VEN though children are a as consumers and young workers, they are being deprived of their rights in wholesale since most of the businessmen are unaware of

To contain children's right viola tion and increase awareness, coord holders are needed, observed right hazardous work as child labour is parents often push their children lucrative to them as cheap financial crisis.

turing factories.

Businessmen engage children in workforce. On the other hand, many even into dangerous works to meet

From Hazaribag to Sowarirghat of Nawabpur to Sadarghat children are found working in hazardous envimanufacturing units. Some are found collecting and drying toxic leather while some are working as helper of bus or human-hauler. No only that, children are engaged in risky works in different industries including engineering workshops balloon, glass and battery manufac-Mamun, 13, who works at HH in Jatrabari in the capital was found risking his life in welding a bumper Automobile Engineering Worksho ronment in different industries and nated efforts among the stake-key stakeholder in businesses the national laws to protect child across the country in large scale to rights, he claimed. make people aware about child Tariq-ul-Islam made the observation while talking to The Daily Replying to a question, Tariq-ul-Star on the issue of Children's Islam said the government has Rights and Business Principles. taken many initiatives to protect Asked about the overall scechild rights especially the rights of nario of child rights in Banglamarginalized and underprivileged desh, he said, "I think the practice children because they are the most of protecting child rights has vulnerable to exploitation.

> "Children are often engaged in different hazardous jobs. We lay top most priority to resist appointment of children in hazardous jobs," he said.

"Aiming to facilitate due care

"The government, in collaboration with the non-government organi sations, is conducting different advocacy campaigns to discourage child labour and to protect child rights."

for new born babies, we have introduced maternity allowance so that the mother does not face hardship to take care of her baby properly," he said. With the aim to check school dropout rate of children the government has taken different initiatives including midday meal, stiend and others. "We will introduce education centres for children in Dhaka, Chittagong, Rajshahi and Khulna These centres will be introduced in Dhaka, one each in Chittagong Rajshahi and Khulna," he said. The centres will surely benefit the marginalised and underprivieged children, viewed Tariq-ul-PHOTO: ANISUR RAHMAN Islam

'Companies must abide by rules to ensure rights of children'

Dr Syed Ferhat Anwar, Professor, Institute of Business Administration, University of Dhaka talks to The Daily Star

NSTEAD of criticizing companies from outside, a L cooperative attitude should be nurtured among the stakeholder to bring a sustainable change in the society for the sake of children, observed Dr Syed Ferhat Anwar, professor of the Institute of Business Administration (IBA) of Jniversity of Dhaka.

"Our purpose should be to buil a sustainable model that can make the maximum use of corporate sector participation in respect to children's right issues", he said.

Syed Ferhat, also Director of Kotler Center of Marketing Excel lence (KCME) of the University of Dhaka, pointed out how the 10point principles that was released on March 12, 2012 in London glob ally and on 30 June, 2012 in Dhaka could become business model for the corporate sector. Mentioning the first principle all businesses should meet thei responsibility to respect children's rights -- Syed Ferhat said that it is about reputation man agement of a corporation and th corporation should consider sup porting children important for a healthy society.

He said companies should understand that children are futu customers and thus the mission business in protecting the interest of present 'customers' should be changed to 'present and future Regarding the second principle elimination of child labour -- the KCME director said multinationa and larger corporate entities use small organizations involving children to earn greater profits. Children are also used to reduce costs and ensure trained and trusted products. The government can future employees.

Companies must abide by rules of employment to ensure rights of children, he said, adding Non Government Organisations (NGOs) operating in various levels of schools, could train up children to ensure long-term relationships and

Pointing out that very few comchildren and using their imaginapanies provide scope for decent tion. This will not only help work and compensation plan, Syed develop a new dimension, but will Ferhat further said, strategic moves also help protect children from can easily help ensure children a campaigns that may harm them. Mentioning that awareness Promotional strategies can be said companies can adopt built by involving nental performance. children and using their imagination. This will help protect children from campaigns that decent work as well as health

Companies in the business of safety can initiate programmes under their Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) banner to ensure protection of children, he said adding, this can be undertaken in partnership with the com pany employing young workers "At the same time, workers can be trained and certified by safety experts to enhance safetyknowledge and at the same time show why children are susceptible to hazards without proper protec tion", said Syed Ferhat. Criticizing some corporate houses, he said products targete for children are hardly made safe Sved Ferhat, who is also Chie Adviser of Bangladesh Brand building on environmental pollution for children is negligible, he programmes to improve environ-Playgrounds and parks can be leased out to schools and commu nity to support children's right, he Mentioning that security has been another major hurdle for children, Syed Ferhat said this task has to be performed by the community at large through commumay harm them.

Regarding protection of children during emergencies, he said though over the years businesses have been involved in disaster management, these initiatives are merely based on promotional cam-

"The corporate sector of today should be more proactive rather than reactive. They should start involving in the business of building preventive measures rather than wait for the calamities to descend on them and react", he Syed Ferhat further suggested that the government and the development partners along with the human rights activists should consider it their business to team up vith the corporate sector for taking things forward to protect and fulfill children's rights.

Some businesses have started to respect child rights they viewed.

ning their business.

OLLOWING massive campaign of different rights bodies and government directives, a number of trade bodies are now running their businesses respecting and supporting children's rights. As a result of their rapid physica and psychological development, tional standards on children's rights

"We fully follow the labour laws and regulations of ILO (Internationa violates children's rights," he said.

children have survival and developappointing child labour, Rahimafrooz ment needs that differ from those of also conducts different sorts of cam adults, they think. paigns against child labour. All societal actors, including busi-"We try to make people aware ness bodies, must comply with about the adverse effect of child national laws and respect internalabour. We launch different cam-

Talking to The Daily Star, in Savar," he said. Rahimafrooz CSR (corporate social In case of emergency, the company responsibility) Manager Junayed lays top most priority on protecting Masrur, said they fully comply with all children and women as children are the national laws and internationa more marginalized and vulnerable standards on children's rights in run-come," he said.

Rahimafrooz never publicises any advertisement and campaign that violates or threatens human rights. Labour Organisation) in running our While developing advertisements business. We never do anything that marketing strategies or promotiona materials of the company, it always "We have strong business principle keeps in mind children's rights, he to protect, promote and respect children's rights. We are committed to Apart from business policies, protect the best interest of children Rahimafrooz runs two projects for We try to make people aware about the adverse effect of child labour. We launch different campaign programmes in the communities. supporting marginalized and underprivileged children.

The company runs Rural Services Foundation (RSF) Model School and College where poor and marginalized children can have the opportunity for education from Class I to Class XII.

The RSF school and college, located in Bogra, currently provides education, accommodation and medical facilities for around 170 children coming from marginalized families hit by hardcore poverty of different Monga-affected areas of the country's northern region.

Another project located in Dhaka titled 'Dhaka Project' provides education and medical facilities to around 550 underprivileged children, who reside in slums, informed Junayed, the CSR manager. These projects will help the children to have quality education and to improve their standard of life as they the future of the country, he said. Talking to The Daily Star, former president of the Federation of Bangladesh Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FBCCI) Annisul Huq said, "Not only his company but also most companies with good standards always feel concerned about protecting child rights in running their busi-

"Particularly in my company, if anyone tries to appoint any child labour, he or she will surely loose the job," said Hug, also the chairman of Mohammadi Group.

"It is my strict order not to appoint any child labour because the major tool of child rights violation is child labour," he viewed. "We have adopted our business policy in compliance with the national and international laws for protecting child rights," he said.

He also felt that corporate business should be formulated in such way so that the child rights are fully protected and respected.

BUSINESS Contribute to the elimination of child labour, including in all business activities and business

Provide decent work for young workers, parents and caregivers

Ensure the protection and safety of children in all business activities and facilities

Jse marketing and advertising that respect

"From Hazaribag to Sowarirghat or Nawabpur to Sadarghat children are found working in hazardous environment in different industries and manufacturing units."

any protective glasses. Usually his job is to load and unload materials with adult worker on and from trucks. Sometimes he does welding when his boss takes a

He told this correspondent that his father who was an auto-rickshar driver lost a leg in an accident and mother works as a domestic help. "I can't tolerate hunger. If I don't work here I'll have to starve", Mamun said, adding that he has three younger siblings at home.

"My family was modestly well-off. went to school. But after my father' accident we become poor", said Mamun. He gets Tk 400 in a week of an auto-rickshaw without wearing In response to questions, propri some time to understand what is child right and business principle. It is not that much risky work and he (Mamun) performs it well, said

Mostafa softly tapping on Mamun's

Many businessmen are yet not aware of child rights

On June 30, 2012, United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) together with Save the Children and UN Global Compact's Bangladesh partner CSR Centre released 'Children's Rights and Business Principles' in Bangladesh -- a call to businesses to step up their efforts to respect and support children's rights in workplace, marketplace and community regardless of their size, sector, location, ownership and structure. The 10-point principle includes elimination of child labour; providing decent work for young workers, parents and caregaviers; protection and safety of children in all business activities; ensuring safe products and services; children's right supportive marketing and advertising method; respecting children's rights in land acquisition and security arrangements; protection of children affected by emergencies; and reinforcement of community and government efforts to protect and fulfill children's rights

Paul Hohnen, an independent consultant on sustainability, says that the principles clearly identified all the key areas affecting children's rights and are placed in one set of document which is compatible with the existing international legal com mitments and statements around children's rights.

UNICEF Representative Pascal

With reference to the importance of child rights and business ethics that are vital to creating a stable Villeneuve in a workshop said, "Child rights are an essential investment in our sustainable future. Human rights apply to all children Safeguarding these rights helps build strong, well-educated communities

Continuous dialogue with the cor porate houses is required on the issue as it would not be realistic to expect that the private sector will be able to adopt all the principles at once.

inclusive and productive business

Playground occupied for other purposes depriving children of recreation.

PHOTO: TAMIM JAMSHED