Gayle's gift on his 33rd

AFP, Colombo

Hard-hitting West Indies opener Chris Gayle celebrated his 33rd birthday on Friday by telling batsmen how to hit sixes during the ongoing World Twenty20 in Sri Lanka.

"It takes a bit of strength and once the ball is in your slot you go for it," Gayle said ahead of the West Indies' first match against Australia in Colombo on Saturday.

"It's instinct to be honest. You have to let the mind and body flow together. You don't want to get stuck in a two-minded situation.

"You just try and be natural out there and things will actually flow for you in the end," Gayle was quoted as saying by the West Indies Cricket Board in a statement.

Left-handed Gayle, whose 27 sixes are a tournament record in the World Twenty20, is one of the most feared batsmen in all formats of the game with a penchant for big hits against both pace and spin.

His rapid-fire 117 off 57 balls with 10 sixes and seven fours against South Africa in the inaugural World Twenty20 in 2007 remains the highest individual score in the competition.

"The key is balance. You have to have good balance to be able to hit a lot of sixes," said the Jamaican, who also has two triple-centuries in Test cricket to his credit.

"I pay special emphasis to my balance. You have to realise that bowlers are not always going to make it easy for you. You have to create the shots, so you have to make sure you do it well."

Gayle said he looked forward to playing against Australia, who thrashed Ireland by seven wickets in their first game on Wednesday.

"The first game is vital," he said. "You don't want to play catch-up cricket in T20, so it's a very big match for us. It will also get our confidence going."

"In our team we bat right down, and bowling-wise we have spinners and fast bowlers. The key for us is to get to the second round and try and take it step by step."

The West Indies, one of the pre-tournament favourites, play Ireland on Monday.

player," said Jayawardene of Murali, whose 800 Tests and 534 one-day wickets are the highest in the world.

"It's going to be tough for these youngsters to say they're going to be the next Murali. What we encourage them to be is the best they can be. If they can do good job for Sri Lanka over the next 10 years, then that will be great."

Jayawardene hoped his team keeps the winning momentum.

"It's a big tournament. That itself is big motivation for the guys to make sure that intensity levels are up. We want to keep the momentum going into the next round," said Jayawardene.

The Sri Lanka captain praised South African all-rounder Jacques Kallis, who recorded the best figures for his country in all Twenty20 with 4-15 against Zimbabwe.

"I don't think anyone would disagree that Jacques would be the best all-rounder in our generation in all forms of the game. He's improving everyday and that's because of the hunger that he has and the competitive edge," he added.

AUSTRALIA V WEST INDIES

Battle for ascendancy

AGENCIES, Colombo

Having registered a comprehensive win in their World T20 opener, Australia would aim to seal a Super Eight berth when they take on the flamboyant West Indies in a Group B encounter at the R Premadasa Stadium on Saturday.

However, it won't be an easy task for George Bailey's boys as they are up against a formidable Caribbean side which boasts of big-hitting Chris Gayle and mystery spinner Sunil Narine in their ranks.

Led by Shane Watson's heroics, with both bat and ball, Australia made easy work of an unpredictable Irish side as they cruised to an easy win in the campaign-opener. But come Saturday, the contest is definitely going to be more intense.

The Darren Sammy-led West Indian side has got enough arsenal in its armoury to derail any side.

However, the West Indian batsmen had failed to impress during their first warm-up game against Sri Lanka, in the absence of Gayle, and were scratchy in the second warm-up match against a resilient Afghan side, barring the Jamaican giant.

But that in no way gives Aussies the license to take them lightly.

West Indies' prowess in the shortest format of the game is well known and Australia would undermine them at their own peril.

The Kangaroos, however, can take some heart from their recent performance against the Caribbeans.

They won comprehensively against Sammy's boys in one of the two T20 games during their recent visit and came close to snatching the second one, losing by just 14 runs.

Australia can be in with a chance in tomorrow's game as well if their bowlers manage to get the better of West Indies' unsettled opening pair, which really has looked to be the soft belly of Sammy's brigade.

Their discomfort against quality spin bowling is the other aspect which Bailey and Co. might try to exploit and with Xavier Doherty expected to be back for the game against the Calypso Charmers, Australia may well field two spinners tomorrow.

Veteran chinaman bowler, Brad Hogg, would be the other tweaker in the line-up.

The Australian batting looked good against Ireland and with Cameron White spending some time in the middle, they can boast of a formidable middle-order.

However, they will certainly come under scanner against Narine, who was recently adjudged the ICC Emerging Player of the Year for 2012.

Although the spinner has been ineffective against the Aussies on previous two meetings but that doesn't lessen his aura.

Australia will also have to be on guard against speedster Fidel Edwards who can surprise the batsman with his pace and has the ability to bowl in the block hole with some consistency.

Lara a Sachin fan

INTERNET, Undated

Legendary West Indian batsman Brian Lara has said that Sachin Tendulkar still has two years of cricket left in him and feels that all Indians should be proud of his achievements.

In an interview to Kapil Dev, and aired on HEADLINES TODAY, Lara said that Tendulkar's class and longevity makes him different from any other cricketers.

"Sachin has done a great job. He started at the age of 15-16, two years before me and is still playing five years after my retirement. This is something every Indian should be proud of," he said. "I've played with him many times and he is a real gentleman. He has stopped playing T20 and I don't know how many ODIs he'll play, but I think he'll play Tests for a couple of years. But whenever he'll take retirement, world cricket will miss him."

Lara, 43, singled out his favourites to win the ongoing World T20 in Sri Lanka.

"India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka [not in that order] are the favourites, according to me. Pakistan is a terrific team, I saw the practice match in which they defeated India. Sri Lanka is very dangerous team, and also India. Anyone of them have the ability to win the title," he said.

The left-handed batsman said that West Indies also have a good chance of winning the tournament because of the unpredictable nature of the format.

"West Indies is a very good team but they are good in pieces. They have some very good players in their ranks but they need to perform collectively. As a group they are really dangerous and are worthy favourites," he averred.

On Dhoni, he said that the India skipper has done a remarkable job and he should be allowed to decide his future.

"In the last few years, he has done well. I know questions are being asked of him but only he knows when he has to go. No captain wants to be sacked, so we should allow him to decide his future," he said.

Lara supported the T20 format, saying that it is an important factor in the growing popularity of the game.

"T20 is a very interesting format; cricket needs it right now. We have seen so many exciting players in this format. I would also love to play it, but now I'm enjoying it as a spectator," he said.

On his own decision to quit cricket, Lara said he did not do so because he was not enjoying the game, but and because he wanted to make way for youngsters.

"I left cricket not because I was not enjoying, but because I thought West Indies needed young players to lead them. But today's cricketers are very different. I only see them with their headphones on when they sit in the bus and go to the stadium or hotel," he pointed out.

"We used to watch great players like Sobers, Sir Viv etc. and that is how we could evolve ourselves. I want to see that thing in current players also."

Nehwal signs mega-deal

REUTERS, Mumbai

Top Indian shuttler Saina Nehwal has signed a three-year deal worth a reported 400 million rupees ($7.4 million) with a sports management company, underlining badminton's growth in the otherwise cricket-crazy country.

The only non-Chinese in the top five of women's badminton, Nehwal won a bronze in this year's London Olympics and capped the celebrations by signing a contract with Rhiti Sports that makes her India's highest paid sportsperson outside cricket.

"With Rhiti's background and credibility, they know how to balance things and that is a big plus point," Nehwal said in a media release.

According to Wednesday's Indian Express newspaper, the three-year deal with the company which also manages cricket captain Mahendra Singh Dhoni, is worth 400 million Indian rupees.

"We're very thrilled with the base amount and it's an honour since she's the first non-cricket athlete they've taken on," Nehwal's father Harvir Singh told the newspaper.

"We are proud to be associated with someone who is not only a youth icon for women in the country but has also done a lot for badminton as a sport," said Arun Pandey, chairman and managing director of Rhiti Sports.

"She has placed India on the world map for badminton and changed the outlook of people in India towards the sport."

Axed England batsman Kevin Pietersen hopes to be playing again for England by the time the tour of New Zealand starts in February next year, he said on Friday.

In a Twitter conversation with New Zealand rugby union star Dan Carter, Pietersen wrote: "Hoping all sorted & I'm on the NZ tour in Feb. If so I'll bring you a gun of abat!"

Pietersen was cast into international exile after sending text messages to South Africa players that contained criticism of then England skipper Andrew Strauss during the recent Test series.

With reports circulating that Pietersen had also fallen out with several of his teammates, he was also axed for the ongoing World Twenty20 in Sri Lanka and next month's tour of India.

England are due to play three Tests, three ODIs and two T20s in New Zealand next February and March.

England's new Test captain Alastair Cook said on Thursday that Pietersen remained in talks with England cricket board officials as the controversial batsman fought to save his international career.

Taylor hits out at sloppy Zim

AFP, Hambantota

Zimbabwe captain Brendan Taylor has described his team as "sloppy" and "below par" after they crashed out of the World Twenty20 with a ten-wicket thumping by South Africa on Thursday.

Zimbabwe were no match for the formidable South Africans as they were reduced to a paltry 93-8 in their 20 overs before seeing their opponents overhaul the low target without losing any wicket with 7.2 overs to spare.

Zimbabwe lost the first group C game against Sri Lanka by a big 82-run margin.

"We came here to win games, and to end on the note we have is very disappointing," said Taylor after the match.

"The sun comes up tomorrow, and unfortunately we head home. There's a long way to go for us and there's a lot of cricket to be played next year. We just want to keep trying to improve and improve in different conditions."

Taylor regretted his team was below par in a major event.

"We went wrong in all three departments. We dropped chances and were sloppy in the field, leaked runs with the ball and didn't score many runs with the bat," said Taylor whose batting was rocked by Jacques Kallis's 4-15.

"You're not going to win games than that. All in all our cricket was way below par, and against quality opposition you're not going to stand a chance," said Taylor, who promised a swift comeback.

"We'd love a couple more games just to prove that we are a far better side. But that's not to be. World Cups are tough cricket, but we'll go home with our heads held high and bounce back strongly next time the World Cup comes around."
