is prone to peace. Traditionally, Chinese people take the principle of harmony as a way of life and try their best to keep friendly and harmonious relation with others. In order to keep relationship harmonious, people treat each other with sincerity, tolerance and love, and do not interfere in other's business. China has its economic relations with other countries with a peaceful and mutually beneficial manner. In ancient time, China had business with other countries through the "Silk Road", Chinese silk, tea, porcelain arrived in Central Asia, Europe and Africa, and from these areas, a wide range of goods were imported into China at the same time, satisfying the needs of the people's life. Different religion and culture being exchanged, we can find colorful music, dance, painting, and sculpture throughout the way. The Silk Road is a trade route, but also a cultural road, the road of peace. Today, China adheres to the path of peaceful development, steadily enters into the international community. China's development has contributed to a more balanced world pattern, and the Chinese people make their efforts to promote the peaceful development of the world with their own peace and development.

"The 21st century will be the century in which the revitalization of Chinese culture takes place," projects Ji Xianlin, a renowned Chinese scholar, in his The 20th Century in China and I. The core value of Chinese culture has nourished the spiritual world generation after generation of the Chinese people, and serves as an important source of national cohesion and creativity. Today it has become the core competitiveness of China's cultural power.
