the members of two groups started. Both the groups used sticks, iron rods and sharp weapons during the chase and counter-chase. The feuding groups also traded nearly 50 gunshots inside the campus and at the RU's main gate that left a BCL man and two Shibir activists injured. Some of the activists of the pro-Jamaat student organisation, who took shelter inside the Central Library after being chased, were mercilessly beaten up by the BCL men. The BCL men also drove Shibir men out of the campus and put up barricades on the Rajshahi-Dhaka highway for around 30 minutes. Around 12:30pm, BCL men entered the campus and damaged two university buses in front of the administrative building. Later, the activists of the pro-AL student body ransacked the residence of the vice-chancellor for allegedly allowing the Shibir activists to establish their dominance in the campus. RU Proctor Chowdhury Mohammad Zakaria was also assaulted by the BCL men when he tried to quell the unrest. The bullet-hit BCL activist Nabiul Islam Lipon, Shibir activists Jahangir Hossain and Shariful Islam were admitted to Rajshahi Medical College and Hospital (RMCH). The other injured, who were admitted to RMCH, include Shibir activists Mosaddek Hossain, Mobarak Hossain, BCL general secretary of RU unit Akhtaruzzaman Takim. Jahangir, Shariful, Mosaddek and Mobarak were later shown arrested along with 11 other activists of Shibir, police sources said. Ahmed Ali, BCL RU unit president, claimed that the Shibir men had attacked the BCL procession to establish their supremacy on the campus. He also blamed the RU authorities for failing to ensure students' security on the campus. Ashrafur Alam Emon, Shibir RU unit president, however, said BCL men, without any provocation, attacked the Shibir activists while they were taking preparations to bring out a procession. "We tried to resist the attack, but police assisted the BCL men", he said. He claimed that six Shibir men, including its general secretary Saifuddin Yahya, were injured by bullets. Abu Hossain Bipu, BCL RU unit general secretary, said Shibir activists brought sacks of brickbats inside the campus yesterday morning, and had been taking preparations to foil their procession. He alleged that though the proctor had caught some of the Shibir activists red-handed with the sacks, he did not hand them over to law enforcers, but rather took an undertaking from them. M Moniruzzaman, additional police commissioner of Rajshahi Metropolitan Police, said student organisations always tried to establish their supremacy on the campus through targeting the admission process for the first year honours every year.

lawmaker, yesterday asked the attorney general outside a courtroom of the Supreme Court in the presence of other lawyers and journalists. By the connotation 'Kalo Biral', barrister Khokon meant Suranjit Sengupta, a minister without portfolio. Although Khokon asked the question in a humorous mood, a startled Mahbubey Alam, the attorney general, indignantly replied: "Khokon, you were not born when Suranjit Sengupta embarked on his political career." The conversation was humorous enough for both lawyers and reporters present to make them break into laughter. The incident took place outside a courtroom after the High Court yesterday fixed October 8 for the hearing of a writ petition that challenged the legality of Suranjit's appointment as a minister without portfolio. According to the media, Suranjit is called 'Kalo Biral', as he had said, after being appointed railway minister, that he would ferret out the "black cat from the bag" in order to make the railway department corruption-free. "M a h b u b e y A l a m [Mahbubey Alam], what has happened with the Kalo Biral's case?" Khokon asked the attorney general as they came out of a courtroom. "Who is Kalo Biral?" the attorney general struck back at Khokon. The BNP lawyer then reminded the attorney general of the petition, hearing of which was supposed to be held yesterday. SC lawyer Tuhin Malik filed the petition against Suranjit, claiming that there was no such post under the constitution. A day after Suranjit resigned in April this year following the railwaygate scandal, the government retained him as a minister. But he was not given a portfolio. The BNP lawmaker also asked the attorney general why he had appeared for the minister since the petition was a personal case of Suranjit. Mahbubey Alam then asked Khokon whether he had seen the cause list and was aware of who the opposite party to the petition was. As Khokon replied in the negative, the attorney general said that the state was the opposite party and he had appeared for the state as its attorney general.

US court lifts Samsung tablet ban

A temporary sales ban on Samsung Electronics' Galaxy Tab 10.1 tablet computer in the US was lifted by a US court yesterday. District Judge Lucy Koh's move opens the way for US sales of Samsung's older tablet model to restart. Separately, Samsung filed a motion yesterday against Apple's iPhone 5 saying its patents had been violated. The iPhone 5 was launched last month and broke Apple's pre-sales record. Apple has not commented on either move. charges," Home Minister Mohiuddin Khan Alamgir said yesterday. He, however, did not disclose the names. The minister was talking to newsmen after a meeting with the Saudi ambassador in Dhaka, Abdullah Nasser Al-Busairi, at his secretariat office in the capital. The judicial commission formed to probe the 2001 post-polls violence has found evidence of over 3,625 major crimes, including murder, rape, arson and looting by cadres of the BNP and Jamaat in the first 15 months of its tenure from October 2001. The commission held a number of lawmakers and ministers of the then government responsible for the incidents. Disclosing the commission's findings on December 1 last year, former home minister Shahara Khatun had said the government would file cases against such offenders. The three-member commission was formed on December 27, 2009 following a High Court order upon a petition by Human Rights and Peace for Bangladesh. Talking to the BBC last night, BNP acting secretary general Mirza Fakhru Islam Alamgir said the government was bringing up the issue afresh to keep the opposition parties "out of the election". "They [the government] are filing these cases as part of a blueprint for eliminating the opposition," he alleged.

want to punish all Buddhists for the fault of one?" Rana shouted at the crowd. "We want Uttam's head. Give him to us," the crowd roared. Uttam is the person whose Facebook was tagged in a photograph maligning Islam. "Uttam does not live here," Osman shouted back. "It is only his father's house. Go away." The crowd argued for some time, but they were hesitant. After all, they were all from the same locality. The mob turned back and went away. But Rana and his friends were not very sure as news after news arrived of the atrocities. So they called some of their relatives to come and join them. After a while, they grew in number to about 30. Rana called the police, seeking help. A little later, six policemen came. The young men armed with sticks took up positions at the entrance to their neighbourhood. True to their apprehension, the attackers returned around 11:30pm. It was a huge crowd of 400 to 500 people. It was even more militant. And none of them were from the locality. Some distinctly looked like Rohingyas as they had tucked their shirts inside their lungis. Some spoke in Rakhine dialect. The young men told them to go back and blocked their way. But the mob was hurling abuses at them. "If you are Muslims then you should join us," some from the mob shouted. They were trying to push through the rickety human barricade.

Somebody started throwing stones at Rana and his friends. Osman was hit in the head and was bleeding. Somebody hit Mosharrif in his arm with a stick. Then the barricade fell away. The mob rushed in like a tsunami. The homes of Buddhists were being battered. Somebody scaled the wall of a monastery and opened the gate from inside. The mob swept in. Rana and his friends ran after them. "This is not a Barua [Bangalee Buddhist] temple. This is a Rakhine temple," Rana shouted, thinking this piece of information might dissuade the attackers. But it did not. Someone set fire to a structure. Rana and his friends used their sticks to beat out the flame. Then he thought of another trick. The young vigilantes started shouting, "Don't torch it! Don't! The Muslims' bazaar is just beside it. If you torch it, the whole market would be gutted. Muslims' houses will be gutted too!" This had an immediate effect. The attackers were puzzled. They did not attempt to torch the temple again. But they vandalised the monastery. They smashed the statues and went away. Rana and his friends stood stupefied on the ground in front of the monastery of Cheraughata. They felt drained of all feelings and strength. They had tried and failed. Still they had tried. A few kilometres away stood the oldest monastery of the country, Raung Kut Bihar, built some 2,700 years ago by the emperor Ashoka. It is a grand monastery. Inside the complex sits a beautiful modern structure that houses orphans. On that fateful night, local headman Kamaluddin and a local leader Shehab were woken up by a phone call. The caller said Buddhist temples Ramu were being torched. They rushed out of their homes and saw the flames leaping in the distant. The children! They must be saved! The thought passed through their minds. The monastery, a rare monument of history and culture, must be saved. They rushed to the monastery and found the monks in stark fear. They had already shifted the children to a small house some distance away. But it was too cramped a place to accommodate 75 kids. My villagers might come out and attack, Kamal thought. He and Shehab ran back and formed a small group. They stood guard at the entrance to their village and ordered all to stay indoors. They spent the whole night there until the army came. They heaved a sigh of relief and, their eyes red shot, went back to sleep. They were happy. Their heritage had been saved. Their prestige had been saved.

ACC to sue

"On receiving the enquiry report, we gave our consent to filing the cases," Shahabuddin said. Since its formation on July 16, the probe committee interrogated 52 Sonali Bank officials and seven of Hall-Mark. The ACC investigation found that Tanvir had swindled the money out through five categories of bank transactions against fake documents during the tenure (between 2008 and May this year) of the then manager of the bank's Rupashi Bangla Hotel branch Azizur Rahman. JS BODY FOUND IRREGULARITIES Meanwhile, a parliamentary sub-committee probing the scam said it had found irregularities in the way the company took out loans of Tk 2,686 crore from the bank. "It is clear to us that the Hall-Mark Group took the huge amount of loan through unfair means. Its managing director also admitted to the irregularities," Tajul Islam, chief of the sub-committee, told reporters after grilling the company's MD at a meeting at the Jatiya Sangsad Bhaban. He said the committee members had asked Hall-Mark MD Tanvir about how he had secured the loans and about other irregularities. The three-member probe body formed recently by the parliamentary standing committee on the finance ministry has already asked the board of directors of Sonali Bank to appear before it today. Tajul, however, did not answer when asked whether the committee would also summon Syed Modasser Ali, health adviser to the prime minister, who had been allegedly involved in granting the loan to the Hall-Mark Group. He said they would quiz the individuals, who were important, to ensure a fair probe. Accompanied by Hall-Mark General Manager Tusher Ahmed, Tanvir, who established the company by the loans, appeared before the sub-committee. The committee members severely blasted him at the meeting. They directed him to submit all documents of loan sanctions and company assets by next Thursday, Tajul said. Emerging from the meeting, Tanvir told reporters, "I could not reply to their [members of the sub-committee] queries. However, I will submit the necessary documents in a couple of days." According to sources at the meeting, Tanvir told the sub-committee that he would clear all bank loans if he was allowed to run his business. He claimed that he had not laundered the money. He said he had taken out the loans against two projects. Of those, Tk 458 crore had already been paid back and now the company's liabilities to the bank stood at Tk 2,202 crore, he said at the meeting. The sub-committee members, however, found anomalies in his claim over the loans and current company assets, a meeting source said. The Hall-Mark Group yesterday submitted some documents of its land to the probe body, claiming that the price of each decimal of its land in Hemayetpur of Savaris Tk 40 lakh. Talking to reporters, Tajul Islam, also a ruling Awami League MP, said they would soon complete the probe and disclose all the findings.
