Launches Daily Star Books with Kuldeep Nayar's autobiography

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Eminent Indian journalist Kuldeep Nayar yesterday urged the South Asians to cultivate cooperation among their countries for their progress.

"Yes, we are Hindus, we are Muslims, we are Pakistanis, Bangladeshis, but, above all, we are South Asians and there is something about us -- our values, traditions and history -- which is definitely different from the West," he told the launching ceremony of Daily Star Books, the book publishing wing of The Daily Star, at the Bangla Academy yesterday.

Day of ideas

Small and profound, witty and serious

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

It is not often that one gets to see so many novelists, poets and litterateurs coming from different corners of the world to share their ideas. But that is exactly what literature enthusiasts got at Bangla Academy yesterday.

On the second day of the Hay Festival Dhaka, the academy premises vibrated with poetry, music and intellectual fervour, with literary events simultaneously taking place at three venues throughout the day. While some aficionados ran from one session to another, others sat in the lawn, listening to the recitals by seasoned poets as well as the younger ones or chatting with their favourite writers.

In the morning, the children's laureate of Wales Eurig Salisbury examined the art of communicating with children at a session titled "Child's Play".

"When I write for children, I try to remember what I

Democracy, animal style

BBC ONLINE

Animals regularly make group decisions that directly affect their everyday lives. But without the convenience of machines or ballots, how do they vote?

Last week, citizens of the United States voted to select who they thought would best serve them as president of their country. They filed into their polling places, and indicated their choices on a touch screen or by colouring in ovals on a response form. Each voter weighed up the multiple consequences of each option and, after careful consideration, reached a conclusion. Then, each individual's

Gulshan 2 becomes 4th kitchen market to ensure safe food

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Traders in the capital yesterday announced DCC-North kitchen market at Gulshan-2 formalin and carbide-free in efforts to promote the market where people can buy unadulterated fish, fruits and vegetables.

It is the fourth kitchen market to be so announced in the capital after Malibagh, Shantinagar and Mohakhali markets.

The Federation of Bangladesh Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FBCCI) organised a programme at the market to make the announcement.

Commerce Minister GM Quader inaugurated the formalin-free market by handing over a sophisticated formalin detector machine to the market committee.

"This market is now formalin free. In case of any doubt, buyers themselves can do the test in the market," Quader said while addressing the programme.

Dhaka, Ctg, Khulna among 15 Asian cities at risk

UNB, Dhaka

Twenty mega cities of the world, including Dhaka, Chittagong and Khulna are more exposed to severe flooding and super-storm but less equipped to deal with such threats, said a study.

The Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) study identified 20 port cities which, in terms of population, would be the most exposed to coastal flooding by 2070s.
