PADMA GRAFT ALLEGATIONS

ACC may sue officials in Dec

Focuses on bridge officials, for now

M RAHMAN

The Anti-Corruption Commission is likely to sue some top officials of Bangladesh Bridge Authorities and Padma bridge project by mid-December for influencing the selection of the consultant for the troubled venture.

But the anti-graft body may not implicate in the case former communications minister Syed Abul Hossain or prime minister's economic affairs adviser Mashieur Rahman at this stage. The two went on leave recently in line with the World Bank's condition to revive its $1.2 billion loan deal.

In its First Information Report (FIR), the commission will also bring allegations against officials of the local agency of the Canadian consultant firm, SNC Lavalin, which was controversially selected for a $50 million job in the Padma project.

Through the filing of the FIR, the inquiry into the WB's allegation of corruption in the project

TIB SURVEY ON MPs

Irked government to complain to TI

TIB defends its report, says it will respond positively if summoned by JS

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government will write to the Berlin-based Transparency International against the corruption watchdog's Bangladesh chapter over its "ill-motivated" survey on lawmakers, Information Minister Hasanul Haque Inu told parliament yesterday.

"Transparency International Bangladesh's report is ill-motivated. It has vilified the lawmakers before people. We will send the report to the TIB headquarters saying we reject it, and ask the organisation to make objective reports," said Inu.

Replying to queries from MPs, who blasted TIB for the survey, the minister said it had become fashionable in Bangladesh to label only politicians as corrupt though various quarters in the society were involved in the practice.

"TIB also did something of that fashion

GAZA CRISIS
Truce agreed: Hamas
Israel says no deal yet
THE INDEPENDENT

A Hamas official says Egypt has brokered a Gaza ceasefire deal that would go into effect within hours, but a spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said "we're not there yet".

"An agreement for calm has been reached. It will be declared at 9 o'clock (1900 GMT) and go into effect at midnight (2200 GMT)," Hamas official Ayman Taha told Reuters from Cairo, where intensive efforts have been under way to end seven days of fighting.

Netanyahu spokesman Mark Regev told Reuters the announcement was premature and Israeli military operations in Gaza, territory run by Hamas Islamists, would continue in parallel with diplomacy.

"We're not there yet," Regev said on CNN. "The ball's still in play."

US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton was heading to the region from Asia and was expected in Jerusalem late on Tuesday to meet Netanyahu.

Both Israel and the United States have said they preferred a diplomatic solution to the Gaza
