CTG FLYOVER COLLAPSE

Negligence in abundance

Probe finds messy work of contractor; death toll 12

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

The absence of safety measures at the construction site of Bahaddarhat flyover in the port city led to the 12 deaths in the collapse of its concrete girders on Saturday night.

A member of the probe body formed to investigate the incident said this yesterday on condition of anonymity. The five-member team led by Additional Deputy Commissioner Khaled Mamun Chowdhury found negligence of the authorities during a visit to the spot in the afternoon, he added.

The site had not been made off limits to commuters and passerby when three girders were being shifted, local people said. The authorities remained negligent though they witnessed a similar incident on June 29, in which several people escaped narrowly when a girder fell.

Abdus Salam, Chairman of the Chittagong Development Authority (CDA), declined to comment when asked why the CDA had failed to ensure public safety.

He, however, said a probe was on and three officials

Burnt beyond recognition

KAILASH SARKAR

Nilufa is all lost; hers is an agony untellable. To Saturday's blaze in Ashulia, she has lost not one, not two, not three but four of her loved ones. They were the meaning of her own self, her existence.

The 20-year-old could yet console herself if, only if, one could tell her where she could find her parents, a brother and his pregnant wife.

Of the 111 dead, 55 still remain unidentified as the bodies have been burned to coal, indeed to cinders beyond recognition. Nilufa has tried in vain to find her people from among those bodies, now at the Dhaka Medical College morgue.
